REPUBLICANS NOMINATE TENER FOR GOVERNOR

Congressman Reynolds Chosen For Lieutenant Governor.

MAKES STRONG TICKET

State Treasurer Wright Named for Full Term and Secretary of Internal Affairs Henry Houck Accorded a Renomination.

JOHN K. TENER.

Republican Nominee for Governor.

The Republican State Convention yesterday, at Harrisburg, nominated the following ticket:

FOR GOVERNOR,
John K. Tener, of Washington.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
John M. Reynolds, of Bedford.

STATE TREASURER,
Charles Fred. Wright, of Susquehanna.

SECRETARY OF INTERNAL AFFAIRS,
Henry Houck, of Lebanon.

The convention was largely attended. The selection of Mr. Tener to head the ticket was marked by the greatest enthusiasm. The weather in Harrisburg was oppressively hot and the delegates hurried through their work in the shortest time possible.

Centre County was represented in the convention by County Chairman Harry Keller and David Chambers.

Mr. Chambers was chosen a member of the Committee on Resolutions. Mr. Keller served as an honorary secretary of the convention.

At the joint meeting of the delegates from Centre and Clearfield counties, Philip E. Womelsdorff, of Philipsburg, was elected to represent the Thirty-fourth Senatorial district on the Republican State Committee.

Mr. Tener, the nominee for Governor, was a recent visitor to Bellefonte, being here at the dedication of the new club house of the Elks. He is at present a member of Congress from Washington County, is a stanch Republican and a man who has achieved splendid success in the business world. Mr. Tener is a fine looking man and stands 6 feet, 4 inches.

The platform adopted stands squarely by the administration of President Taft and warmly indorses the work of Governor Stuart and United States Senators Penrose and Oliver.

C. F. WRIGHT

Republican Nominee for State Treasurer.

It is entirely probable that Secretary of State P. C. Knox would have been made the nominee for Governor had he allowed his name to go before

MISSING MAN FOUND

John Gettig Located in Ft. Wayne, Ind., His Mind a Blank.

Last Wednesday Samuel D. Gettig, Esq., one of Bellefonte's prominent attorneys, received a telegram that his brother, John A. Gettig, who made his home in Braddock, had mysteriously disappeared. Mr. Gettig at once left for Pittsburg and with the authorities began a search for the missing man. He was to have been married last week and on the evening prior to day for the wedding he left his boarding house to visit at the home of his fiancee. To reach her home he had to cross to the Allegheny side of the river and it was at once supposed that he had met with foul play and that his remains would be found in the river. However, there was no clue that would lead to his whereabouts and the authorities were unable to find any trace of the missing young man. While this thorough search was being made the young lady to whom he was to be married received a telegram from the authorities at Ft. Wayne, Ind., stating that they had found him there.

When found on Saturday young Gettig was wondering about Ft Wayne, his mind a blank, not being able to even tell his name. Seeing the initials in his hat the policeman began guessing names that begin with "G" and mentioning the name of "Garret" it dawned upon the wanderer that his name was Gettig. In one of his pockets was found a card bearing the name of his fiancee and word was immediately telegraphed to her that Gettig had been found there. His brothers at once left for Ft. Wayne and brought the unfortunate man back to his home.

He was unable to tell anything that transpired after his leaving his boarding house. Gettig was an intelligent young man aged about 23 years and was secretary to one of the Pittsburg capitalists, being employed in Braddock.

CENTRE COUNTY PICNIC

Former Residents Will Hold Annual Outing at Philadelphia.

Former residents of Centre County, now residing in or about Philadelphia, will hold their annual picnic, at Belmont Mansion, at 2 o'clock, on Saturday, June 25. Belmont Mansion is in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. It is one of the most beautiful parks in the world.

The picnic on Saturday will be the seventh annual outing of the Centre County Association of Philadelphia, which is the title of the organization of native Centre countians. Persons who have not attended the picnics or banquets held by the organization have no conception of the splendid affairs arranged to bring old friends together and talk over old days at home. They are among the most successful and largest functions held in Philadelphia and always attract widespread attention. Saturday's picnic promises to be the most successful held in the last seven years.

The officers of the association are: President, Dr. Roland G. Curtin; vice-president, Ira D. Garman; treasurer, Dr. S. Gray Mattern, and secretary, Dr. J. C. C. Beale. Ira D. Garman is chairman of the committee which has charge of the picnic. The several members of the committee are Thomas Foster, Max Liveright, Dr. S. Gray Mattern, William A. Magee, Dr. Stuart C. Runkle, Herman A. Haupt, L. Olin Meek, Dr. J. C. C. Beale and Chairman Garman.

Hospital Notes.

Clarence Frumm, of State College, operation, doing nicely.

Mrs. Lavina Florey, Centre Hall, admitted for operation.

Miss Marie Doll, Bellefonte, admitted for operation.

Mrs. Arena Young, Bellefonte, admitted for operation.

Chas. Williams, Bellefonte, brakeman on Tyrone Division, hurt at Morris' Branch, Leceration and abrasion of face.

Master Russell Leterman Milesburg operation resection of ribs.

James McNichol, Bellefonte operation appendicitis.

Mrs. Kephart, Tyrone, appendicitis.

Darius Blair, Stormstown discharged cured.

Grim Offers To Withdraw.

Senator Grim, the Democratic nominee for Governor, yesterday issued a statement declaring that he would withdraw from the field if a petition were presented asking him to do so and signed by a majority of the delegates to the Allentown convention. Should the convention be reconvened, Senator Grim added, he expected to again aspire to the nomination for Governor. He denied that his nomination was accomplished by fraud.

MUNSON'S FLOP UPSETS DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN

Leaders Demoralized By Action of Williamsport Man.

SOME ASK NEW TICKET

Delegates Ask that State Convention be Reconveved and New Candidate for Governor Chosen—Democratic papers Bolt Grim.

From one end of Pennsylvania to the other Democrats are excoriating the Hon. C. LaRue Munson, the man who was scheduled for the Democratic nomination for Governor and who fizzled out at the last minute. The same Democrats who but a few days ago were becoming dizzy in their praise of Mr. Munson are now livid in their frenzy of criticism and abuse.

Summed up, the facts are these: Mr. Munson was slated for the nomination for Governor at the Allentown convention. That he expected to be nominated is demonstrated by the fact that he had asked Charles J. Reilly, of Williamsport, and former Judge James Gay Gordon, of Philadelphia, to present his name to the convention. As late as Monday, preceding the convention, Mr. Munson was in Philadelphia and there met State Chairman Arthur G. Dewalt, who was slated for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Munson arranged to go to a certain hotel at Bethlehem on Tuesday and remain there, in readiness for any emergency, until after the convention.

Instead of going to Bethlehem, Mr. Munson remained in Philadelphia for several hours and then went to his home at Williamsport. Some time between Monday night and Tuesday morning he dictated a letter to his managers at the Allentown convention, withdrawing from the field and directing that his name be not presented to the convention. His letter created a sensation. The slate fixed up by the leaders went to smash, from top to bottom, and it was with difficulty that sufficient names were gathered up to fill out a ticket.

From the time of the receipt of Mr. Munson's letter down to the present hi Democratic colleagues have done nothing but indulge in the most bitter denunciation of his course. The Philadelphia "Record," which had been his warmest champion, deliberately charged that Mr. Munson had "sold out" and that he had withdrawn as a candidate for Governor with the expectation of being appointed a federal judge by President Taft. In an interview, Mr. Munson denied that he had done anything that was dishonorable, that he had been guided by the advice of his physician and that he couldn't understand why his former friends were so bitterly criticising him. In a later interview Mr. Munson admitted that he partly expected, or would like to, receive an appointment to the federal bench. But he denied that he had been a party to any kind of a deal.

Meanwhile the troubles of the Democrats seemed to multiply. Samuel B. Price, who had been nominated against his will for Lieutenant Governor, formally withdrew his name from the ticket, which will necessitate a meeting of the Democratic State Committee to fill the vacancy. Some Democratic newspapers openly bolted the nomination of Webster Grim, of Bucks county, for Governor. Several delegates to the ill-fated Allentown convention addressed a letter formally asking that the convention be reconvened to reconsider its action and nominate a new ticket. Charles P. Donnelly, Colonel Guffey's chief lieutenant in Philadelphia, jammed his hat down over his eyes and took a steamer for Europe.

Probably the most information disclosed by Mr. Munson since his sudden withdrawal was contained in an interview which he gave to a personal friend a reporter on the Philadelphia "Times." This was as follows:

"On Thursday of last week I was seized with an attack of vertigo, which my home physician thought was only indigestion that could be cured with simple remedies. Not feeling that my condition was improving I consulted professionally Dr. John H. Musser, of Philadelphia, who I believe to be the leading consulting physician of this city. He gave me a full examination and his professional advice was that I could not safely stand the strain of the vigorous campaign which I knew would be necessary if I were nominated.

"Shortly after the consultation I received some telegrams of a business nature referring to my private affairs. These had no connection with political matters, but I could not disclose them without injury to myself and others.

COUNTY SOIL SURVEY BY U. S. AGRICULTURE DEPT.

Report is Prepared in Cooperation With State College.

URGES FRUIT GROWING

This and Truck Farming Pointed Out as Most Profitable Lines Awaiting Development—Thirty Types of Soil Found in County.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., has just issued the report on the soil survey of Centre County, Pennsylvania, which was made in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State College, School of Agriculture and Experiment Station. The report is accompanied by a large colored map of the county showing the location and extent of the various soil types found. The following is a summary of the report:

"Centre County is situated in the geographical centre of the State. It is irregular in shape and one of the largest counties in the State, comprising an area of 715,520 acres, or 1,118 square miles. The western part of the county lies in the Allegheny Plateau, with an average elevation of about 2,000 feet above sea level. The remainder of the county consists of rolling limestone valleys, separated by narrow, sharp, mountainous ridges of sandstone.

"Centre County lies in the drainage basin of the Susquehanna River, the western and central parts being drained by Moshannon, Bald Eagle, and Fishing Creeks and their tributaries into the West Branch of the Susquehanna, which river forms the northern part of the western boundary of the county. Penn Creek drains the eastern part of the county into Susquehanna itself. A little drainage in the south-central part of the county is affected by small streams that empty into the Juniata, another tributary of the Susquehanna. A feature of the drainage in most of the limestone valleys is the lack of surface streams, the run-off passing into holes and then into subterranean streams.

"Settlement of the county was begun only a few years prior to the beginning of the Revolutionary war. The agricultural development of the county was slow for nearly half a century after settlement. The winters are cold, with considerable snow, while the summers are comparatively cool. The growing season in the Allegheny Plateau section is so short that cultivated crops like corn do not always mature, and the tenderer vegetables can not be grown with safety. In the valleys, however, the season is long enough to mature all crops. The mean annual temperature at State College is 49 degrees and the mean annual precipitation 40.2 inches.

"General farming, consisting of the growing of cereals and grasses, supplemented on a small scale by dairying and stock raising, is the characteristic agriculture. The soils are suited to the production of these crops and practices and make comparatively good yields. The grain crops in order of acreage are wheat, corn, and oats, with barley, rye, and buckwheat of minor importance. A large acreage is devoted to the grasses for hay and pasturage. A little less than one-half the acreage of the county is in farms, of which about two-thirds is improved. The average size of the farms is 127.1 acres.

"A little over one-half, or 56.3 per cent. of the farms are operated by the owners, the remainder are leased either on a share or cash basis.

"With the exception of the alluvial soils found in the bottoms which comprises members of two soil series, the soils are closely related or associated with the underlying rock formations. The rocks underlying Centre County are of a sedimentary origin, ranging in geological age from Cambro-Silurian to Carboniferous, and consist of limestones, sandstones, and shales. The limestones have given rise to the Hagerstown series with five soil types represented. The sandstones and shales have formed the Dekalb and Upshur series. Another series occurs in the Barrens, the geological history of which is little known. These are poor, unproductive soils. The sandstones and conglomorates, besides a number of soil types, form considerable areas of rough stony land, which are of no use agriculturally except for pasturage. Two other miscellaneous types having descriptive names are Swamp and Meadow. The bottom land soils represent two series, viz, Huntingdon and Moshannon. In all 30 types of soil, including as types rough stony land, Meadow, and Swamp, were recognized.

"The limestone or Hagerstown soils

EAGLE WILL SCREAM

Arrangements Are About Completed for Safe and Sane 4th of July Celebration.

The Amusement Committee which has been planning and arranging for a safe and sane celebration of the Nation's birth, have practically completed their work and the complete program, as announced this week, is about the same as the announcement made in "The Republican" last week. The amusement feature is so diversified that there will not be a dull minute during the whole day and the fact that it will be safe and sane should make it appeal to all. Our citizens should be united in making this one of the biggest and best and glorious Fourths Bellefonte has ever had. Following is the line-up of the day's events:

From 9 to 11 o'clock a. m., band concert in the diamond.

10 o'clock little girls parade from Bishop to Linn street. Only very little girls, with dolls and carriages are eligible, and prizes aggregating $10.00 will be given for the best turnouts.

11 o'clock, marathon race in charge of Dr. Weston. Prize $15.00.

11.45 a. m., reading of Declaration of Independence in the Diamond by Dr. J. Allison Platts.

A unique part of the program will be a boy's base ball league contest. All boy's teams are eligible and during the forenoon they will play a regular series of games to decide which are the two best teams. These two teams will play the deciding game on Hughes field in the afternoon, the winner to receive a substantial prize. All teams desiring to enter this contest should report to Hard P. Harris as soon as possible so he can arrange the schedule for that day.

At 12 o'clock all the whistles in the town will be blown, bells rung and a noisy time generally for five or ten minutes.

At 1 o'clock the big parade of the day will take place. It will be made up as follows: Drum corps, Company L. N. G. P., fire companies, Pleasant Gap fantastics, Red Men in uniform, P. O. S. of A., automobiles decorated, and last the boys tin horn batalion.

At 3 o'clock there will be a base ball game on Hughes field between [illegible] that will make a very interesting contest.

From 7.30 to 10 o'clock band concert.

At 9 o'clock there will be a monster display of fireworks put off on a hill where everybody in the town can see it.

Examine The Label On Your Paper.

When you pick up your copy of "The Republican" today let your first duty be that of examining the label which shows how you stand with the publisher. If you are paid up, go ahead and read you paper in peace and contentment. If you are in arrears, stop and realize that we are trying to help you, but that you must do your part.

Some persons, well meaning, of course, but evidently misinformed, have an idea that newspaper publishers are merely bluffing when they say that the Post Office Department, at Washington, has required an affidavit setting forth the exact number of persons who owe for more than twelve months subscription. The publisher of "The Republican" can testify to the fact that it is no bluff. We were compelled to send such an affidavit to Washington last week. We made an earnest plea for an extension of time for those who are in arrears. The reply we received was to the effect that sufficient time had already been extended and that now it was a case of pay up or drop delinquents from the list. The Post Office Department has granted us a few days longer in which to settle delinquent accounts. For this much we are thankful and we again ask all who are in arrears to cooperate with us complying with the postal regulations.

In the last ten days quite a number of persons have paid up their accounts. There are still a number who are in arrears. It may and probably will inconvenience some of the latter class to square up with us. At the same time, it should be borne in mind that we have gone to no end of inconvenience in trying to protect them from collections by legal process. It has been unpleasant and inconvenient for both sides.

We are doing, and will continue to do, our level best to give to our readers the best newspaper published in Centre County. We aim to make it a strictly Centre County newspaper, a newspaper that prints the home news. We quite naturally expect our subscribers to pay their just bills; that and no more. If a man buys a pound of meat he expects to pay the butcher. If he buys a loaf of bread he expects to pay the baker. If he gets married he expects to or should, at least, pay the parson. Why should the man who receives a newspaper not expect to pay for it?

Again we ask you, stop and examine the label on your paper, and if you are in arrears, PAY UP.

LEAGUE BASE BALL IS UP TO LOCK HAVEN

Without That Team Bellefonte is Barred from League.

MAY BE INDEPENDENT

Team Here is Assured Regardless of Plans of Other Towns—Exhibition Games Scheduled with Milesburg, Howard and Huntingdon.

It's up to Lock Haven to say whether or not there is to be a baseball league for this section of the State. If Lock Haven will go along, both Bellefonte and Lock Haven will be admitted to the Central Pennsylvania League, which takes in Milton, Sunbury, Shamokin and Mt. Carmel. If Lock Haven fizzles out, the proposition is off and Bellefonte will fall back upon independent baseball for this summer.

This is the situation, following a meeting at Sunbury on Monday night, last, at which time the Central Pennsylvania League managers considered Bellefonte's application for admission. Lock Haven dosen't want to go along. Renovo is willing, but this is not acceptable to the league managers, due the to great distance some of the teams would have to travel to reach that point.

J. Linn Harris represented Bellefonte at Monday night's meeting. Lock Haven was not represented. For Lock Haven it was unofficially explained that the town lacked sufficient enthusiasm to support a league team this year. Efforts are being made to have Lock Haven reconsider. If these fail, Bellefonte will at once devote its attention to arranging games independently of any and all leagues. It is hoped, however, that Lock Haven will come around and that the league will be in business, with both that town and Belle onte.

The proposition for a league taking in Bellefonte, Lock Haven, Renovo and Jersey Shore is off. Jersey Shore could not raise the enthusiasm or the money to warrant going ahead.

While league plans are being worked out, Bellefonte will go ahead and play several independent games. Today (Thurday) Bellefonte will play Milesburg. Tomorrow Bellefonte will play Howard, and on Saturday the team will go to Huntingdon, for a game with the crack club of that place.

A Fine Crop.

The Lauderbach-Barber Co., of Philipsburg, with branches at Bellefonte, Clearfield, Du-Bois and Punxsutawney, Pa., have bought Col. Reynold's peach crop which is estimated from 15,000 to 20,000 bushels.

The Col. Reynolds' orchards have more than a state wide reputation not only on account of their size, but from the fact that expert care is constantly given the trees and the fruit handled in a thoroughly modern and scientific manner.

The weather conditions to date have been ideal for the maturing crop, which is expected to be of a finer quality than in any past year.

An innovation new to this section will be introduced this year in the shape of grading machines, which will insure a uniform size in each package.

Contest For Postmaster.

A contest has developed for the appointment of postmaster at Bellefonte. The term of Postmaster T. H. Harter expires in February, next. Mr. Harter is an applicant for reappointment and is soliciting letters of indorsement to Congressman Charles F. Barclay. Captain Samuel H Williams is also an applicant and is asking business men and others for their support.

Plead His Own Case.

Charley Gehret was given a hearing before Squire Musser, on Monday evening, the charge being malicious mischief. He had no lawyer, plead his own case, acknowledged that he had done wrong and was released on payment of the costs.

Chief of Police Weds.

Samuel M. Sankey, chief of police, at Philipsburg, was married on Wednesday evening, last, to Mrs. Jeanette Riddell, of South Philipsburg. Mrs. Sankey is a daughter of Archibald Bathurst, of South Philipsburg.

Wages Increased

The employes of the Bellefonte and Nittany Lime Co. at Salona quarries, have received a substantial increase in their wages, the increase amounting to about 20 per cent.

NIGHT NOISES OF FOREST

Animals and Birds That Seldom Move About in Daytime.

Nothing can be more weird, more mysterious, than night in the forest. Well versed in hunting lore though he be, a man will hear sounds at night which he cannot identify. The hours of darkness are not hours of silence, for there are birds and beasts whose day begins only after sundown, who seek their food in the black night while the diurnal creatures are sleeping.

One of the very commonest animals in the East, the porcupine, is so completely nocturnal in its habits that it is rarely seen. Perhaps as you ride by moonligh your pony shies at a whitish, rustling something which crosses the track just ahead of him, says a correspondent of the Field, or your favorite terrier, after a marrauding expedition, will return with a stout and cruel quill embedded in the muscles of his chest. The silent watch over a kill for a goat stealing leopard is full of eeriness and mystery. Ears are intensely on the alert, so that no sound in the vicinity is missed. Then is made startingly manifest the strange double life of the jungle, the life of the night as opposed to the much more familiar life of the day.

Everywhere around are strange movements and rustlings, while those creatures which move across such of the foreground as is illuminated by the uncertain rays of the moon seem to take on fantastic shapes, until after many nights of watching it is almost easy to believe in pixies and goblins, or even the strange beings of native legend.

In Kashmir on a spur overlooking the Lolah Valley we had pitched our dining tent under a huge walnut tree. Every night strange rustlings—and chatterings used to come from its ample foliage and walnuts detached by busy teeth would tumble from the tree. We took our visitors to be flying squirrels and made attempts to shoot one of them; but though we had a big log fire close to and illuminated the walnut tree with pine torches as well, we never actually saw one of the animals nor established their identity for certain.

In the plains of India and Ceylon the great fruit eating bats are no doubt responsible for many of the night sounds heard among the tree tops. Then there are huge insects of many kinds, whose crawling among the dry leaves adds largely to the noises which come from the ground. Crocodiles become very active at night and make considerable excursions from their watery haunts.

I have known a crocodile to walk 200 yards from the edge of a lake in which it lived in order to reach the carcass of a dead pig. Co[illegible] the pig with it to the lake; the broad trail told the whole story next morning as clearly as though we had witnessed the entire performance. Sambbur and sloth bears are also creatures of the night, the deer particularly so in Ceylon, probably because they are so incessantly harried by hunters. On the Neilberries and in Wynard I used to see sambhur come out to feed comparatively early in the evening, while they did not retreat to their midday haunts till some time after sunrise.

Bears in Ceylon are so seldom seen by day that it is customary to sit over water holes for them in the hot weather. There are plenty of them in the island, and they find cave dwellings such as they love among the numerous rocky hills which are a feature of the Ceylon forests.

Though it is so hard to know who or what are the makers of the incessant movement which is going on all night in the woods the actual voices of birds and animals are by no means equally difficult to identify. In the hills, even in a big station like Mussoorie, are constantly heard the loud calls of barking deer; the little creature's resonant bark is almost indistinguishable from that of a dog. The muntjac is said to be particularly vociferous when there is a leopard about. I have, however, often heard these tiny deer barking in a most excited way when there could have been no leopards within many miles.

A very familiar warning of the approach of night is the squawk of night herons as they sail overheard. In most Indian compounds is found a family of quaint little brown owls who come out of the hollow tree where they spend the day as soon as dusk descends and begin their voluble chatter. Natives are very superstitious about the big gray white owls and consider them to be the harbingers of evil, but no bad odor attaches to the merry little brown fellow who is everybody's friend.

Hindoos have all sorts of beliefs regarding trees. If you want a man to tell the absolute truth you take him beneath a pipal. Under the shadow of the pipal every Hindu is supposed to become a George Washington. In the Madras hills the natives always regard large trees as the abodes of devils. Near a bungalow I lived in at Wellington, 10 miles from Ootacamand, there was a large hollow tree. In the hollow pious hands had erected a miniature altar of bricks, and on this were usually to be seen one of those little classically-shaped clay lamps to burn mustard oil and a few lived in the tree.

On the other hand there are aborignal tribes in Wynard who never leave the shelter of the pathless forest. I have stood on a hill and looking over the vast jungle of Mysore have seen thin smoke wreaths ascending far away from the centre of the forest, the fires of those jungle men cooking their evening meal.

KINSHIP OF SORROW

Words of Mark Twain That Voice Many a Mute Prayer.

On my way to town and my work that morning, my thought still busy with the obligation of parents to children, I began on my morning paper, which is just as much a habit and just as necessary as my breakfast; and I was reading along half-mindedly when suddenly, without warning, there was a lump in my throat, and I could not see the words, says Ermin J. Ridgway in The Delineator. It seems that I had been reading about Mark Twain's funeral--just the usual news story, written apparently without any thought of pathos on the writer's part, telling how they had laid him beside his wife, who had gone before him so many years, and his children, and I suppose I was thinking of my folks-we are all so personal, aren't we?

The writer man was telling about dates and things, and I had gotten to the line "with this inscription on the marker"—an inscription which Mark himself had probable written for his beloved when she went away, and I could not see the last three words:

Warm Summer sun, shine kindly here.
Warm Southern wind, blow softly here.
Green sod above, lie light, lie light,
Good-night, dear-heart, Good-night,
Good-night.

All of us who have stood at the graveside have felt the voiceless prayer to sun, and wind, and sod to deal tenderly with our beloved. And later, in the broken home, so full of cherished memories, whispers everywhere of the dear one's presence, yet so silent. In the long night when the rain fell, and the winds blew, and our hearts cried out their unheeded protest. In the long days when our souls went searching the Beyond for one word, one look, and found them not, and we have tried to understand and could not. We have eaten our meals and been ashamed that we were hungry, not realizing, perhaps, that grief wears out the body and makes it beg for food. We have taken up our work and been ashamed to find an interest in it, not realizing, perhaps, that our minds have formed the habit of work, and crave it. And in time we have been ashamed to find our hearts growing more cheerful, not realizing, perhaps, that this is what a healthy, normal human heart should do; that nursing a grief is a doleful and often a direful occupation, besides being the last thing, probably, the mourned one would wish us to do.

THIS IS CERTAIN

The Proof That Bellefonte Readers Cannot Deny.

What could furnish stronger evidence of the efficiency of any remedy than the test of time? Thousands of people testify that Doan's Kidney Pills cure permanently.

Home endorsement should prove undoubtedly the merit of this remedy. Years ago your friends and neighbors testified to the relief they had derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. They now confirm their testimonial. They say time has completed the test.

Mrs, John Fisher, 51 S. Water St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did three years ago when I gave a public statement in their favor. A member of my family procured Doan's Kidney Pills from Green's Pharmacy Co. and received prompt and permanent relief through their use from an attack of kidney complaint. I have also taken Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and pains through my kidneys and they have always had the same beneficial effect. You are welcome to publish this statement."

Rice Sowing in Siam.

A very ancient Siamese custom, which takes place annually in May, is the plowing ceremony, when the first rice of the year is sown. A patch of land is selected by Brahmin astrologers, and in a shed, built on the spot, the Minister of Agriculture, accompanied by two priests, performs a variety of symbolic rites over a pair of oxen, to prepare them for their task. The oxen, decorated with flowers, are next fastened to a plow, which the Minister drives over the field for about an hour. When he had finished plowing four elderly women of the King's household sow the ground with consecrated rice, leaving the grain uncovered. The oxen are then liberated and several kinds of grain are put before them. They are carefully watched, because of whatever kind they eat most there will be a scarcity during the coming year, while that of which they eat little will yield abundantly, so the superstitious Siamese believe—Wide World Magazine.

The Conservation of Nature's Resources.

Applies as well to our physical state as to material things. C. J. Budlong, Washington, R. I. realized his condition, and took warning before it was too late. He says: "I suffered severely from kidney trouble, the disease being hereditary in our family. I have taken four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and now consider myself thoroughly cured. This should be a warning to all not to neglect taking Foley's Kidney Remedy until it is too late." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

EFFECTS OF COCAINE

Fascination at First, But the Craving Causee Intense Agony.

There is no drug so fascinating in its perfect relief of discomfort, fatigue, mental worriment and sense of exhaustion as cocaine, says the Medical Record. The impression which follows from its use is that of renewed vigor and unusual capecity, as if some new force has been added.

The first after effects following the withdrawal are of short duration and not especially painful. Later this condition increases. The pain takes on a mental activity, a species of irritative melancholia and profound exhaustion, which seeks relief at all times and under any circumstances.

Nature seems to protest against the physical and psychic injury done in the most alarming way. This is seen in the facial agony of the cocaine taker when deprived of the drug. His sufferings are internal and not seen in muscular excitement. The profound change that follows its use in the quiet face, serene satisfaction and perfect relief is evidence of its effects.

There appears to be a more pronounced susceptibility to this drug than to alcohol or opium. Very few cases are found in which the effects are unpleasant. Many persons become alarmed when they discover its tremendous fascinating effects and make great efforts to escape. In their efforts to accomplish this they turn to morphine spirits and other drugs.

A great many cocaine takers in this country are poisoned by spirits and drugs and are exhausted before cocaine is taken, and the relief which this brings them is a new experience, increasing the degeneration. Cocaine addiction can be concealed for some time, hence its peculiar danger.

Druggists, physicians and patent medicines are responsible for this new scourge of humanity. The remedy is to stop its sale, except for some specific purpose, to be noted on a public book, and when a doctor uses it freely there mustibe some accounting so as to prevent its danger.

Drinks served from the soda fountain containing cocaine are attracting increased attention by the sudden popularity and enormous sale in certain sections. When the fact is ascertained that their chief value consists in cocaine in small quantities efforts to suppress them are both difficult and doubtful. The proprietors by merely changing the names can continue the use, and if the soda fountain dealers refuse to dispense them they are frequently sold direct to the customers.

At a Fire in Mexico.

It might be thought that such an exciting thing as a fire would startle the Mexicans out of their habitual indolence, but such is not the case. The alarm of a fire at Matamoros, Coshuila, Mexico, was given by the discharge of numerous pistols and guns; and the writer hastened to the scene—thinking at first, that a battle was raging. After a long interval-during which the people watched the fire with interest, chattering among themselves meanwhile-there appeared, placidly trundling along the road, the Matamoresan equivalent of a fire-engine-a barrel rolling along the ground drawn by a reluctant "burro." A swivel pin in each end of the keg permitted it to roll freely, and ropes attached it to the animal. Behind walked the "fire-brigade" a solitary peon, bearing a bucket. Arrived at the scene of the conflagration, the water in the barrel was poured into buckets and hauled to the roof of an adjacent house, whence it was flung on to the flames. Everybody was greatly excited; the calmest thing of all was the fire, which burnt steadily on till there was nothing left to consume. Then, as the spectacle was over, the people dispersed. Everyone was satisfied--except, perhaps the unfortunate owner of the house that had been destroyed. Wide World Magazine.

Arabs at the Bath.

Some 20,000 Arabs take the baths at Hamman Rirha every year. Two-thirds of the number are women. Not only do they take the waters for medicinal purposes, the bath is to the Arab woman a place where she meets her friends. They remain for long in the waters chatting, laughing and singing. Then they wrap themselves in their burnous and sleep in the sun. During the bath they eat lemons or organges, and afterward retire to the cafe. Many of the woman take votive baths, and in the hope of being mothers, carry with them little dolls. It is there that they pray to Sidi Siman and offer sacrifice of fowls with incense, and burn in the earth, brilliantly illuminating the night. London Globe.

The Fairies in Ireland.

There are many sorts of fairies in Ireland. The trooping clans, the friendliest, wear green jackets, and the solitary fairies wear red. According to McAnally, a peasant once witnessed a battle between them, and when the trooping fairies began to win he was so overjoyed "to see the green above the red" that he gave a loud hurrah. Immediately all vanished from view, and he found himself thrown headlong in the ditch. In Mr. Peats' classification the weird but not unkindly merrows, or sea fairies, come next, then the fairy doctors and witches, who inhabit puddings and pots, bewitch butter, steal milk and the like; the banshees, not always harbingers of death; the leprecaun, or fairy shoemakers, "the only industrious persons among them," for they dance their shoes away in a single night; the pookas, first cousins of the Scotch brownies, who for their sins are obliged to help the housewife with nightly elfin labors; the giants, the ghosts and the satanic race of demon cats, and last, the "kings, queens, princesses, earls and robbers."—Sarah H. Cleghorn in Atlantic.

Malay Weapons.

The national Malay weapon, the creese, is said to have been invented by a Javanese monarch of the fourteenth century. Its varieties are said to exceed a hundred, and there are in Javanese no fewer than fifty names for them. It varies in size from the two foot wavy blade of Suiu down to a mere toothpick. But the peculiarity is that the weapon is never ground, but kept rough and sawlike in edge by scouring with lime juice or the juice of an unripe pineapple, sometimes mixed with arsenic, and it is on this account that creese wounds are so dangerous. Old specimens are so eaten away by this practice that the blade seems formed from a bunch of wires roughly welded up. Such creeses are highly valued, and some of the ancient ones, heirlooms of chiefs, with grotesquely carved and inlaid hilts and sheaths, are almost unpurchasable.

The Little Things That Tell.

A south side mother was dressing for a tea the other afternoon when the front door bell rang. She instructed the maid that if the visitor appeared to be about to make a formal call to say she was not at home. But the mother had not counted on the five-year-old daughter playing in the front yard.

The maid, seeing a woman dressed as if for calling, obeyed instructions.

"She is not at home," the maid said.

"Why, she is, too, Minnie," came a sharp interruption from the child on the lawn. "I saw her lower the curtain just now."

"Perhaps she just came in," the maid responded weakly. "I'll see."

The situation was saved by the fact that the visitor was the mother's sister, whom the maid did not know.—Kansas City Star.

The Antiquity of the Organ.

The organ is the most magnificent and comprehensive of all musical instruments. While the pipes of Pan, aside from that mythical personage, indicate a very ancient use of pipes as a means of producing musical sounds, the "water organ of the ancients" furnishes to the student of organ history the first tangible clew regarding the remote evolution of the instrument. In the second century the magriphs, an organ of ten pipes with a crude keyboard, is said to have existed, but accounts of this instrument are involved in much obscurity. It is averred that an organ, the gift of Constantine, was in the possession of King Pepin of France in 757, but Aldhelm, a monk, makes mention of an organ with "gilt pipes" as far back as the year 700.

Punning His Specialty.

"So you have made up your mind to be a specialist—in what line?" was the question put to a struggling doctor by a friend.

"I don't know," was the answer. "I have been considering various advantages in different branches. A chiropodist can generally get a foothold, no matter how bad business is; a manicurist has usually something on hand, and an ear and eye specialist can often get a hearing when there is anything in sight. I haven't dwelt on the possibilities of throat or dental or hair experts because the two former always look down in the mouth and the latter may get but a bald living or be expected to dye for his patients!"

Siberian Camels.

The native camels of Siberia are a source of constant wonder to travelers. On the Mongolian plateaus, for instance, the thermometer often registers a temperature of 40 degrees below zero, but the camels do not mind it at all, walking about as blithely as if the weather were as balmy as spring. On the other hand, the temperature on the Gold desert in summer is sometimes 140 degrees above zero, and the beasts mind that heat just as little as they do the extreme cold.

DISEASE OF LIP AND LEG IN SHEEP

About the time of the recent outbreak of foot and mouth disease in the east many urgent requests were sent to experts to examine certain herds of sheep in which it was feared foot and mouth disease had appeared.

This examination proved the disease was not the dreaded foot and mouth disease, but one which has become known as lip and leg ulceration. It is caused by a specific germ, is highly contagious and may be communicated to young pigs, calves and other animals.

As a result of the failure in dipping to destroy infection, the bureau now recommends the treatment of individual animals and reasonable detention of herds in which infected animals are found until all danger of further outbreak is over.

This treatment of individual animals is an almost endless task for sheep owners whose holdings aggregate tens of thousands of animals, but at present it seems to be the only effective method of combating the disease.

Each infected sheep is caught, and the ulcerated spots are thoroughly disinfected with solutions of carbolic acid or other recognized disinfectant agents.

Where heavy scabs have formed and the ulcerations are deeply rooted it is necessary to thoroughly open up the sores so that the medicine gets to the seat of the trouble. Ulcers of long standing should be cauterized by an application of zinc nitrate or caustic potash.

A good many of the sheepmen have been inclined to doubt the contagious nature of this disease, claiming that the lesions were simply the result of minor infection, caused by wounds to the mouth from eating rough grasses and brush or from the pricks of cactus.

It is likely that these agencies are helpful in spreading the disease, since the small wounds made in this way furnish easy access to the germs of the disease. Mild cuts originating in this manner which are neglected are likely to develop into a more virulent form and spread, not only among the lambs, but may develop in range cattle. For these reasons various stringent quarantine measures are being enforced by both government and state officers in the hope of eradicating the disease at an early date.

Hog Jottings.

Movable hog houses have come to stay.

The cost of product is lessened by pushing the pigs for early maturity.

The danger of overfeeding in case of young pigs is always inimical to maximum results.

Do not overlook the importance of making a pig's food palatable from the beginning to the end of the season.

The possibility of expanding the production of pork is so great that we shall never see a scarcity of this product.

The loss of condition at weaning time may be greatly reduced if the pigs have been accustomed to supplementary foods.

Keep Hands Dry When Milking.

Milking with wet hands is a filthy practice. The clean milker uses clean hands and is sure before he begins that the cow's udder is clean and that no falling dirt can get into the milk. Using lard on the hands to make milking easy will aid in making hard milkers. It will also help to keep the cow's teats tender. Dampening the teats with milk also has the same effect.

THE VETERINARY

An Indigestion Remedy.

For a horse troubled with indigestion feed oats, bran and hay. Keep him off grass. Do not feed carrots or corn. Allow free access to rock salt. Reduce the grain ration one-third at first and increase as he does better. Give him half an ounce of Fowler's solution of arsenic night and morning. Work him lightly or exercise fully every day. He should have a box stall in stable.

To Do Away With Itching Skin.

When a mare is affected with itching skin clipping would be the best treatment. Then wash itchy parts with a one to fifty solution of coal tar dip as required. Stop feeding corn and linseed meal and continue oats, bran and hay.

Garget in the Cow.

If three-quarters of the udder in the cow do not give milk now they never will, and it would not pay to keep her for breeding purposes. She should be fattened for slaughter. She doubtless had an attack of garget or the duct of the teats were closed and garget resulted.

KIDNEY TROUBLE

A SIMPLE LITTLE JOB

What Those "Humble Duties" of a Wife and Mother Really Are.

"Here's in a nut-shell," said Brown to me. "I am now 28 years of age, have my own business, have brought it to such a state that I have decided to take a partner."

"Take one," answered I.

"There's the rub," he gave me back. "My partner must be such an all around knowing one that I'm afraid I'll have hard work to fill the position.

"My partner must be able to make laws and to enforce them, must be able to carry out complicated chemical work, must be a skilled mechanic, must know something of economics, must be able to buy wares of all kinds with due consideration of my finances, must be able to do tailoring, of a kind, if necessary."

"Hold on, Brown," said I "Are you dippy, as the vulgarians say?"

"No," replied he. "I want a wife. Look around among your friends and see if any one man among them could do all that a good housewife should be able to do. She must make just laws for the family and enforce them.

"She must understand the complicated processes of cooking. Making, mending, washing, ironing and otherwise caring for the clothing of a family requires mechanical skill. Bringing up a child properly requires far more knowledge and wisdom than selling dry goods of standard makes and prices year after year.

"Where is more science and skill required than in the sick room? And if the wife does not know how to do all of these things how can she direct the work of her paid help, especially if the help knows less than she does?"-American Magazine.

Are You Sick?

Much sickness is due to a weak nervous system. Yours may be. If it is, you cannot get well until you restore nerve strength Your nervous system is nature's power house; the organs of your body get their power from it. If the power is not there, the action of the organs is weak, and disease (sickness) follows. Dr. Miles' Nervine cures the sick because it soothes the irritated and tired nerves and gives the system a chance to recuperate. Try it, and see if you do not quickly feel its beneficial effect.

"I was given up to die by a leading doctor. Got one of Dr. Miles books and found that Dr. Miles' Nervine fit my case. From the very first dose I took I got better. I am better now than I have been for years, and do all my own work on the farm. That's what Dr. Miles' Nervine has done for me, and I am glad to recommend it to others."

LOWERING COST OF ROAD BUILDING

Dragging a Means of Saving Millions of Dollars.

SOLVING THE MUD PROBLEM.

How Stretch of Roadway In Trenton, Mo., Deemed a Failure For Traffic After Rainstorms, Converted Into an Ideal Highway by Use of King's Simple Invention.

To overturn moss grown customs, to change the highway legislation of states, to revolutionize the roadmaking methods of the nation, to arrest the attention of the roadmakers of a continent, to improve the common earth roads to an immeasurable degree and at the same time save millions of dollars by reducing road building expenses—this is the province of the simple, cheap, uncouth, but efficient King drag. Little did I suspect when first I rode a drag down the highway that such claims would ever be made, says D. Ward King, the inventor.

The initial trip was taken in the spring of 1896, and the result was so pleasing and satisfactory that the work has never lagged from then until now. The effect on the road was instantaneous. The passage of the drag wrought a wonderful change. Whereas the road had been very rough, with two deep ruts in evidence, after the drag had been used it was comparatively smooth, and the ruts, which before dragging stuck out like sore thumbs, were rendered unobtrusive and unobstructive. Before none but the hardiest adventurer dared drive out of the beaten track; afterward there was no need to choose a way, for all the surface was smoother than the best portion had been.

HIGHWAY OF EARTH.
[From Good Roads Magazine, New York.]

The stories told about the King drag and its work are preposterous. They are unreasonable and absurd, and yet they are absolutely true. But I ask no one to believe, for my only object in telling them is to shock the public into giving the new system a trial.

Here is one they are telling in Iowa. In Cedar county a gentleman riding in a spring wagon on a dragged road drove out on one side to allow a four horse wagon load of logs to go by him. The loaded logs went merrily on their way, but the spring wagon had to be dug out with a spade.

From over near Trenton, Mo., comes another. It seems that some years ago a stretch of creek bottom road habitually overflowed after every heavy rain. It regularly became a mass of mud and water. The community declared that it was a physical impossibility to fill in enough earth to build a roadway, and the authorities were planning to condemn land for a new road a quarter of a mile away from the creek. At this moment somebody suggested a test with a King drag. Although the creek still covers the roadway during each freshet, there has been no serious difficulty with that road since the test began.

To the man who drives a team the word gumbo means broken doubletrees, horses mired down and other bad road calamities. A quarter of a mile of this sort of gumbo lies between my home and the railway station at Maitland. One morning when I boarded the train at Villisca, Ia., on my return from a lecture trip the trainmen said in response to my inquiry for news from down the road: "Well, sir, they had a terrible storm at Maitland last evening. When we stopped there the rain was falling in sheets. One could hardly see the depot." The train arrived at Maitland, and I stepped into my buggy and drove home over the gumbo quarter. I could see by the debris on the fence wires, still dripping wet, that water had stood three or four feet deep on the road during the night, yet there was not a puddle on its surface, and we traveled its length without the buggy wheels throwing any mud.

Another season the floods covered this same gumbo quarter with water and kept it standing there for more than a week, the road being traveled every day. I appealed to the highway authorities to erect a barricade, for I felt a personal pride in that road, and the prospect of its destruction gave me great mental pain. But the authorities said they were powerless because they could stop public travel only when traveling became dangerous to the public, so they did nothing. At the end of the week the water receded, and this King dragged gumbo boulevard emerged from its seven day baptism absolutely unharmed.

VALUE OF GOOD ROADS.

They Would Tend to Lower the Cost of Living.

The 2,000,000 miles of unimproved roads which the country has to its discredit are as heavy a burden upon the unfortunate "ultimate consumer" as is an excessive tariff. Every pound of produce hauled from the farm to the market bears an inflated price because of the excessive cost of its transportation from the farm to the point of shipment.

For instance, it costs an average of almost 2 cents more to haul a bushel of wheat from the farm to the station nine miles away than it does to ship a bushel of wheat from New York to Liverpool, 3,100 miles away. This excessive transportation cost must be made up by the farmer in charging more for his wheat, by the miller in charging more for the flour, by the baker in charging more for bread and finally, of course, by the "ultimate consumer" in paying more for his bread.

As the farmer and the miller are also consumers, the excessive cost of road transportation really levies a tax upon all. Whatever doubt there may have been about the need for systematic road improvement in the United States facts and figures such as these finally dispelled.

If there was ever any work calculated to fill the proverbial "long felt want" it was the work of the office of public roads.

JUDGE FOR GOOD ROADS.

W. W. Harnden Announced His Improved Highway Policy.

"If there is one thing I am unqualifiedly for," W. W. Harnden, a new county judge in Missouri, said recently, "it is good roads and plenty of them. I believe it is the most important function of the county court to provide them. It is being realized over all this country—and with the advent of the motorcars more than ever—that good roads are the most important asset of any community.

"So far as I am concerned I shall do all in my power to see to it that the rock road system of Jackson county is a model both in the quantity and the quality of its roads. And I believe that these roads should be built primarily with a view to the convenience and profit of Kansas City, which supplies most of the funds.

"It is my idea that we should first see to it that the roads are kept in first class repair and then build more roads. One thing I hope to accomplish, with the co-operation of Judge Patterson, is greater facility in the annual oiling of the roads. It is my idea that enough men should be put on the job to finish the oiling of the roads, say, in a month, so that they would be clean and free from dust during the season when those who drive can enjoy them."

TO FORCE ROAD BUILDING.

Negligent Supervisors Will Be Prosecuted by Altoona Autoists.

Finding that requests and entreaties had failed, officials of the Altoona (Pa.) Motor club have been instructed to take legal steps to compel road supervisors to clear the public roads of loose stones and put the highways in good condition. At a meeting it was decided to ask the district attorney to prosecute all negligent officials. While most of the supervisors have co-operated with the motorists, several of them having charge of two of the most traveled roads in this section have done nothing.

Make the Roads Beautiful.

The National Good Roads association in convention recently recommended that the enlisted men of the army be used in making good roads. How better could they serve the country than by beautifying and making the roadways more serviceable? We remember that wherever Caesar and his legions went good roads followed, and some of those highways are there today to prove that they are the best thoroughfares in Europe. If this order ever went into effect a regiment would consist of about six privates the next morning.

A Unique Improvement Scheme.

Says a recent writer: "I know of a local paper whose editor interviews all the mail carriers when the roads are in good condition to drag after each rain and secures the names of all the men who donate work on the drag. These are then published as a roll of honor. Of course a man doesn't drag roads just to have the good he is doing in that way exploited; but, all the same, one likes to know that the good he does is being noticed, and it certainly is by those who travel the dragged roads whether they read the paper or not."

Build For Permanency.

Land and property, said a speaker at a good roads convention, were valuable in proportion to their accessibility to market or pleasure, and whatever adds to the accessibility enhances values. The history of the country, he stated, bore witness to the most useless and wasteful extravagance in the use of money and labor on its highways, and the lesson to be learned was to build, as did the ancients, for permanency and with the utmost care and thought for the future.

Good Highways Uplifting.

There is nothing that contributes more to rural uplift than good roads. For social and economic improvement communication must be easy. Without good roads it is impossible for the people of rural communities to meet and discuss ways and means of improving rural society.

Points For Mothers

we hear almost too much of nerve rest nowadays, but there is not often much said of giving the baby a nerve rest.

Imagine how you would like to be danced or joggled or made to show off in all your waking hours. Yet that is the fate of the average baby from the time it is big enough to take notice.

Is it any wonder that children develop St. Vitus' dance or get inflammation of the brain, not to speak of horrid dispositions? What they need is nerve rest.

The more you ignore the baby, the less you treat it as a prodigy, the more comfort it and you will have in years to come.

Do not have your child show off, no matter how much its cunningness may tempt you to do so.

Make a practice of keeping the baby by itself the greater part of the day. It is surprising how soon, with proper training, the child will be content to be in its crib, playing happily with a single toy or just looking around.

Night Air Not Dangerous.

The old fashioned idea that the night air is dangerous has been entirely exploded. It is all right if taken in at the proper places—the nostrils. Of course, going into the ears or other tender parts, it may cause trouble.

Most people find it impossible to believe in the newest methods in the up to date hospitals, where pneumonia patients are cured out in the air, sleeping and receiving treatment day and night, in fair weather and foul, in the open.

But it is really remarkable how working girls who have married and are the mothers of small children take an interest in this new movement, for many of them realize the value and importance of keeping their babies outdoors hour after hour. Here is a plan adopted by some friends and that should help mothers who cannot go out a great deal.

Clothe the baby warmly and put him in his carriage or crib in as large a room as you can. Throw up the windows and see that every aperture opposite is closed, so that there will be no draft. The baby will sleep as well as in the park almost. Babies as well as every one else should sleep out of doors in order to be healthy and strong and resistant.

The Rainy Day Cupboard.

A mother lately hit upon the happy idea of having a "rainy day" cupboard, the key of which always remains strictly in her possession and is only used when a rainy day keeps the children indoors. The contents are added to and varied from time to time. There are crape paper, with a book of instructions how to transform it into various pretty things; paints, magazines to be colored and cut out, beads of all colors and sizes and the ever fascinating jigsaws. These are all sacred to wet weather, and since the rainy day cupboard was instituted rainy days have ceased to be dreaded in the home.

A Ruskin Truism.

Ruskin says: "There is just this difference between the making of a girl's character and a boy's—you may chisel a boy into shape as you would a rock or hammer it into him, if he be of a better kind, as you would a piece of bronze, but you cannot hammer a girl into anything. She grows as a flower does—she will wither without sun; she will decay in her sheath as a narcissus will if you do not give her air enough."

Cure For Earache.

Children are apt to have earache from no appreciable cause. A few drops of warm olive oil dropped into the ear with a medicine dropper and retained with a tiny wad of absorbent cotton, which should be heated before it is placed in the ear, will sometimes afford quick relief. To lie with the ear resting upon a hot water bottle is also very soothing.

Do Not Overtrim.

Put too little trimming on a child's dress rather than too much. It costs no more to dress a child becomingly than unbecomingly. Select colors and materials which will be becoming to a girl's complexion, hair and eyes.

The College Girl's Baby.

No firelight's glow, no lamp's dull gleam,
No rocking chair, no time to dream,
With baby in the by-lo land,
Close, cheek to cheek and hand in hand.

Steam heated flat, electric light
And system, system, day and night.
The baby goes to bed to sleep.
Why, then, should mother vigil keep?

No nervous babies now, made so
By rocking them, as now we know;
No pampered, selfish child today
As those brought up the other way.

The college girl's sound sense combines
With what in scientific lines
She's learned is only really good
For healthy, perfect, babyhood.

She never veers a single jot,
But keeps the baby to a dot,
On time, nor ever humors him
In any foolish baby whim,

And loves him just as much, no doubt,
And schools herself to do without
The cuddling and the nonsense rhyme
In rocking chair at sleepy time.

ANCIENT BRIDGES.

Some Built Before the Christian Era Still Standing In China.

Suspension bridges which were built in the time of the Han dynasty (202 B. C. to 220 A. D.) are still standing, striking examples of oriental engineering skill. According to historical and geographical writers of China, it was Shang Lieng, Kaen Tsu's chief of command, who undertook to construct the first public roads in the Flowery empire.

At that time it was almost impossible for the province of Shense to communicate with the capital. Lieng took an army of 10,000 workmen and cut great gorges through the mountains, filling up the canyons and valleys with the debris from his excavations. At places where deep gorges were traversed by large and rapidly flowing streams he actually carried out his plan of throwing suspension bridges, stretching from one slope to the other.

These crossings, appropriately styled "flying bridges" by early Chinese writers, are high and dangerous looking in the extreme. At the present day a bridge may still be seen in the Shense which is 400 feet long and is stretched over a chasm more than 1,000 feet deep. How those early engineers erected such a structure with the tools and appliances at their command is a mystery which will probably never be explained.

Why He Applauded.

"Are you fond of music?" asked a stranger of the young man at the concert who was applauding vigorously after a pretty girl had sung a song in a very painful way.

"Not particularly," replied the young man frankly, "but I am extremely fond of the musician."

The Berry Outrage.

If there is one Democrat in Pennsylvania to whom the Democratic party is under obligation it is the Hon. William H. Berry. As State Treasurer Mr. Berry turned up sufficient excitement to reawaken the Democratic party, give it a new lease on life and in the estimation of a few, at least, prompt the belief, or hope, that to be Democrat was to be "some pumpkins."

Mr. Berry was entitled to the Democratic nomination for Governor. The sentiment of the convention, and also the crowds in the galleries, was almost unanimous for him. All that Mr. Berry lacked was the official "O. K." of Colonel Guffey. Mr. Grim had this and Mr. Grim got the nomination.

The Centre County delegation to the Allentown convention voted for Mr. Berry, but their votes were nullified by Colonel Guffey's orders to his agents to jam through the nomination of Mr. Grim. Colonel Guffey cares nothing for Centre County Democrats unless they contribute grist for his mill.

Centre County Democrats might just as well have held no primaries and elected no delegates to the Allentown convention. The delegates from here had the fun of paying their railroad and hotel expenses and the inconvenience of the long trip to and from Allentown. Their going and coming made no difference to Guffey. It never did and it never will.

The Munson Fiasco.

The Hon. C. LaRue Munson appears to have got himself into a peck of trouble. In the vernacular of the sporting fraternity, he seems to have "fallen between." He now couldn't become Governor in a thousand years, and to accept a federal judgeship would be to publicly plead guilty to charges heaped upon him by his former Democratic friends.

Perhaps the most charitable view that may be taken, with the evidence now in hand, is that Mr. Munson occupied the the position of a boy trying to play a man's game. "The Republican" some months ago took a pronounced stand against Mr. Munson as a canidate for the Supreme Court bench. We did so because we believed that he was not the man for the place. Recent developments more than vindicate our course.

Even so, we are unwilling to believe, for the present at least, that Mr. Munson stooped to dishonor. We believe in the policy of a square deal for everybody regardless of politics. Mr. Munson owes it to himself and his family and friends to tell the whole truth about the mess which threatens to ruin him, politically at least.

Until he has told the whole truth, or at least finally convicts himself by his silence, it would be charitable to suspend judgement.

Say Grim Knew of It.

Pottsville, Pa., June 17—That Senator Webster Grim, the Democratic nominee for Governor, had knowledge of the proposed withdrawal of Munson several weeks ago is the belief and information of a number of Schuylkill county Democrats, who were visited by Grim at that time.

Several things which he said then, which were unintelligible at the time, seem very significent now, and are strong indications that Grim was in the confidence of the plotters, and was to keep secret Munson's intentions so as to defeat Berry.

Local newspapers were requested to keep Grim's visit here secret, and when asked the reason for such an extraordinary request, were told that something was to be "pulled off" in Grim's interest, which required secrecy. Philadelphia Record.

"Stung."

It is said that when the Hon. Jim. Schofield learned that the Hon. C. LaRue Munson had thrown up the sponge at the Democratic State convention, the Hon. Jim. took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, spat on his hands and roared so that all within a hundred miles could hear:—

"Stung."

HENRY HOUCK
Republican Nominee for Sec. of Int. Affairs.

the covention. A strong movement for Knox was launched in Pittsburg last week. It at once assumed such proportions that President Taft telegraphed Senator Penrose to meet him in Philadelphia on Saturday. Following this conference the President and Mr. Knox were in conference, at Washington, and at its conclusion Mr. Knox announced that he had been urged to remain in the President's cabinet and that he accordingly had withdrawn his name as a candidate for Governor. Mr. Knox issued the following statement:

"The President having expressed to me this morning his earnest wish that I should remain at my present post, I am constrained to decline to allow my name to be presented as a candidate for governor of Pennsylvania at the forthcoming Republican convention. But for this I would have deemed it my duty to have accepted the nomination, if it had come to me as the general choice of the party. I appreciate the expressions of confidence and assurances of support I have already received, and I hope and am sure the convention will be able to find a candidate who will merit the full support of the party at this particularly important time. In my judgment, there is no more fruitful field for high public service at this period than the states, whose proper powers and relations should be appreciated, exercised and preserved for the general good of the whole country."

SAD AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. O'Laughlin, of Clearfield, the Victims.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. O'Laughlin, prominent socially in Clearfield, were victims of a distressing automobile accident near their home, on Saturday, last. While attempting to cross the railroad tracks, about one mile and a half from Clearfield, their automobile was struck aquarely in the middle by a fast train. Mr. O'Laughlin was hurled a distance of about thirty feet, sustaining a fractured skull and other painful injuries. Mrs. O'Laughlin was dragged some distance with the car and was also terribly injured. The train was quickly stopped and Mr. and Mrs. O'Laughlin were taken aboard and hurried to the Clearfield hospital. There it was found that both were in a critical condition.

Mr. O'Laughlin is a prominent attorney in Clearfield and a member of the law firm of Murray & O'Laughlin. His wife is a daughter of Thomas H. Murray, the senior member of the firm, and one of the most prominent men in Pennsylvania. For a number of years Mr. O'Laughlin was chairman of the Republican County Committee, of Clearfield.

Democratic Paper Bolts Grim.

Pottsville, Pa., June 16—The office of the Evening Chronicle, the only Democratic daily in Schuylkill county, was the scene of several conferences between Democrats from different parts of the county today and, as the result, the Chronicle this evening bolted Grim, declaring that "his nomination was forced by 'Boss' Guffey and the crooked Democratic gangs of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, cities which furnish few Democratic votes.

"Candidate Grim, the Democrat with the Guffey collar, will not be seriously heard of in November, but that will hardly hurt his feelings, as he must realize, if he is at all keen in discernment, that he was simply put up as a stool pigeon. Schuylkill county, good for 6000 to 10,000 for Berry, may now be in the Republican column."

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain unclaimed at the Bellefonte post office for the last week: W. M. Gates, J. Irwin, Miss Edna Masten, Chas. T. Miller, R. M. Shreffler & Sons; foreign, Berniminp DiRizzo, Pasquale DiRizzo. Persons calling for these letters will kindly explain that the same have been advertised in "The Republican".

"Suffered day and night the torment of itching piles. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Ointment. It cured me permanently."—Hon. John R. Garrett, Mayor, Girard, Ala.

Munson's Flop Upsets.

But if I could do so they would assure any fair-minded person that a candidacy for any political office would be inadvisable.

"Then after mature deliberation and realizing that I could not stand the strain of a campaign, or assume any additional burdens, I came to the conclusion that I could not permit my name to be presented to the convention.

"I reached home about 10 o'clock Monday night, and dictated to my stenographer the letter to Mr. Edwards and mailed it at once to Allentown. Mr. Edwards tells me by some mistake of the hotel clerk the letter was not delivered to him until 5 p. m. Tuesday, when it should have been delivered in the morning of that day.

"I can summarize by saying that I was advised by the very highest professional authority that I could not safely undertake the campaign, and this, coupled with the business reasons I have referred to, prevented my acceptance of the nomination. Had the nomination been accepted by me it is probable that I would have been compelled to retire in the midst of the campaign and thereby have injured my party."

Mr. Munson's denials, however, are unsatisfactory to his Democratic colleagues. State Chairman Dewalt, a warm personal friend, brands him a "damned coward." Colonel Guffey declares that he was imposed upon. Senator J. K. P. Hall appears to be the only Democrat who knows the inside truth about the Munson fiasco, and he won't tell.

Wedded on Wednesday.

Miss Mary Smith, daughter of Mrs. Mary Smith, of East Bishop Street, was married to Charles Pennington, on Wednesday morning, at 11 o'clock. Miss Emma Smith, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Harry Pennington, a brother of the groom, was the best man. Mr. Pennington is employed at Harvey's bakery, at State College, at which place the young couple will make their future home, residing for the present with Mr. Pennington's parents. Among the guests at the wedding were Mrs. Flora Barefoot and William Smith, of Centre Hall; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith, of State College; Mr. and Mrs George Smith, of Altoona; John Smith, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pennington, parents of the groom; Harry Pennington, and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Pennington, of Benore; Misses Emma and Esther Pennington, of State College.

Krape—Miller.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Cruse on East Curtin street last evening when Ira D. Krape, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Krape, of Saloona, was united in marriage to Miss Leah Eleanor Miller, of Renovo. The wedding took place at eight o'clock and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas S. Wilcox, D. D., pastor of the Methodist church. The ceremony was witnessed by the immediate friends of the contracting parties.

The bride is a well known and highly esteemed young lady of Renovo while the groom is an industrious young man and a brother of Mrs. Cruse, at whose home the wedding took place. They left this morning on a wedding tour to Washington, D. C., and upon their return will reside in Bellefonte, making their home with Mr. and Mrs. Cruse for a time.

Would Reconvene Convention.

Harrisburg, June 18—William M. McNair, a delegate to the Democratic state convention from the Tenth district of Allegheny county, today filed a request at state Democratic headquarters that the Allentown convention be reconvened. The request was as follows:

"Chairman of State Convention Democratic Party of State of Pennsylvania.

Hon. John G. Harman, Sir: As a duly elected delegate to the state convention from the Tenth district of Allegheny county, I do hereby demand that said convention be recalled in view of the recent disclosures, in order that it may reconsider its action of June 15, 1910.

(Signed)
"WILLIAM M. McNAIR."

Under the rules of the party a convention can be recalled at written request of one fourth of the delegates. The Allentown convention contained three hundred delegates so that any demand for recall would have to be signed by 75.

Bars State Aid For Roads.

Deputy Attorney General William M. Hargest, at Harrisburg, has settled the question whether counties can apply for State reconstruction of roads without concurrence of township supervisors by a ruling that they can not do so, except where roads have been under the provisions of the county road act of 1895.

The question has been before the State Highway Department from several counties, the latest instance being where the commissioners of Carbon County asked the Highway Commissioner to let a contract for reconstruction of an abanoned turnpike running through unseated land.

Mr. Hargest holds that the law contemplates local initiative and that the road act of 1909 repeals the portion of the road act of 1901 relative to abandoned turnpikes. Abandoned turnpikes are not county roads, but township roads, and must be maintained and improved as such.

The decision will have effect on proposed road building in other counties.

County Soil Survey.

are recognized as the strongest and most productive soils of the county. The soils of the Upshur series are next in favor, and, besides being productive of the same general field crops as the limestone soils, are considered especially well adapted to fruit growing. The Dekalb soils as a class are considered poor soils. They are devoted to the same crops as the soils of the other series. The soils of the Morrison series are not extensive and are of little farming value.

"Crop rotation is followed quite generally throughout the county. It consists of corn, wheat, oats, and grass cut for hay two seasons and then pastured for a year or two. Commercial fertilizers are used, supplementing barnyard manure and the clover crop. Liming is quite generally practiced.

"The farming class in Centre County is in a fairly prosperous condition. The wagon roads are good and railroad facilities excellent. There is a strong demand for all the products of the farms in the nearby towns. Modern means of communication, rural free delivery of mail; and rural telephone lines are available throughout the county. The section affords exceptional educational advantages.

"Some improvement could be made in the dairy business by weeding out the unprofitable cows and by making more use of soiling crops. In general, the practice of green manuring to improve the soils should be extended. There is room for the extension of special forms of farming and horticulture. Fruit growing and the production of truck are perhaps the most profitable lines awaiting development."

Recent Deaths,

MRS. MARGARET E. KRIDER.

Following an illness of four months' duration, Mrs. Margaret E. Krider, wife of George Krider, died at 10:35 o'clock Thursday night, at her home, 405 Twenty-second avenue, of diseases incident to old age. Mrs. Krider was born at Curwensville on October 2, 1836. Her maiden name was Margaret E. Braden and she was married to Mr. Krider on October 3, 1854, at Pine grove, Centre county. They came to Altoona fifteen years ago, having lived on a farm in Sinking valley for ten years. Mrs. Krider was a faithful member of the Third Presbyterian church and was one of the most respected residents of Fairview. She is survived, besides her husband, by the following children: Mrs. Andrew Geist, of near Frankstown, formerly of Altoona; Miss Emma B. Krider, at home; John B. Krider, of 906 Fourth avenue, this city; George H. Krider, of East Altoona, and J. E. Krider and Mrs. John S. Fleck, both of Sinking valley; also a half brother, Marshall Lewis, of Kylertown, Pa. and two sisters—Mrs. Hannah Williams and Mrs. Medora Marks, both of Port Matilda. The funeral services were held at the home on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. J. E. Irvine officiating. Interment was made in Rose Hill cemetery Altoona Tribune.

WILLIAM A. BAGLEY.

William A. Bagley, an old soldier, died on Friday last at the National Soldiers' Home, at Dayton, Ohio. Deceased was born in Ansonia, Conn., in 1843, and enlisted during the Civil war, serving his country with distinction on the field of battle. At the close of the war he removed to Philipsburg, where he was married to Miss Mary Simler. His widow and the following children survive: John, Mary and Mrs. S. R. Burris, of Philipsburg; William J., of Barnesboro; Dr. Charles, of Delaware, and Florence, of Glen Richey. Deceased was a member of the Baptist church and also of John W. Geary Post, No. 90, G. A. R.

MRS. MARGARET MILLER

Mrs. Margaret Miller widow of the late Major Harry Miller, died Monday night at her home in Boalsburg, her death being due to complications due to liver trouble. She was born in Union county 78½ years ago. Mrs. Miller was twice married, her first husband being Jacob Reish and to this union six children were born. To the second marriage one child was born. She was a member of the Reformed church of Boalsburg.

The funeral took place this morning and interment was made in the cemetery at Boalsburg.

JAMES KELLY.

James Kelly, for many years a resident of Bellefonte, died on Thursday, last, at the home of his nephew, Thomas Loughley, at Philadelphia. He had been ill for some time. Deceased was aged 70 years and was well known here. Surviving are one brother, Michael, of Bellefonte, and one sister, Julia, of Philadelphia. The body was brought to Bellefonte on Monday for interment in the Catholic cemetery.

THEODORE PAUL.

Theodore Paul, a son of the late C. J. Paul, of Philipsburg, and a brother of John Paul, of that place, died on Wednesday, last, at the German hospital, at Buffalo, N. Y. Deceased was aged 39 years and is survived by a widow and one son and two daughters, David, Loretta and Lucinda.

WILLIAM CARNEY.

William Carney, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Carney, deceased, for many years residents of Philipsburg, died last week in Pittsburg. He had been ill but a few days, his death being caused by pneumonia. Deceased was aged 40 years and is survived by two brothers, Michael and John, the latter of Osceola.

Sunday School Convention.

The Centre County Sunday School Convention will be held in Snow Shoe, on June 29 & 30th, begining at 8 P. M. on the 29th. There will be a number of able speakers, including State field workers, and also a good program. The sessions will be full of instruction and interest to all who are interested in Sunday School work.

We hope that every Sunday School in the County will send delegates to this convention. This will be the annual meeting at which all denominations affiiliate, and gain new enthusiam for the work.

Will all delegates and speakers attending this Convention please send their names to Miss Anna Park, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, Snow Shoe, Pa.

Respectfully,
L. W. NUTTALL,
County Secretary.

Important to Auditors.

Borough and township auditors are requested by the Prothonotary's Office, at Bllefonte, to inform themselves in regard to Act of Assembly, No. 221, passed in 1909, relating to the salaries and duties of borough and township auditors. All auditors are required under this act to publish by posting printed handbills in at least five public places in their district a full copy of the report and also file a full copy of their report in the office of the Clerk of Quarter Sessions Court within ten days thereafter. Many auditors in Centre County have failed to comply with this law. A penalty of $100 fine is provided by the law for each violation.

Campaign Expenses.

Campaign expense accounts, of candidates at the recent primaries, have been filed with Prothonotary Klmport, as follows:

For Congress—Charles E. Patton, $5,631.45. W. C. Heinle's account not filed.

For State Senator—Joseph Alexander, $224.24; George M. Dimeling, $63; Philip E. Womelsdorff, $158.

For State Representative—J. C. Meyer filed no account, under the exemption clause covering expenses under $50.

Miss Pressler Weds.

A small but very pretty wedding was that at 8 o'clock last night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Pressler, on Logan Street, when their daughter, Miss Anna E. Pressler, became the bride of Oscar M. Shay, of Milesburg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. Winey, pastor of the United Brethren church, the very pretty ring ceremony being used. Following the wedding the happy young couple received the hearty congratulations of all present, after which a splendid supper was served.

"NO. 7"

They've got a hoodoo on the track,
That isn't all of Heaven—
But something on the other tack,
That fire and water leaven:
A mongrel monster, big and black,
They call it Number Seven.

It makes a noise like LaFollette,
You fear it can't be trusted.
'Twill puff and blow and fume and fret,
With all its entrails rusted.
And when it gets its whistle wet
You'd think Old Nick had busted.

Some think it is a Hippo-po,
The way it makes its jaw go—
Escaped from Roosevelt's lasso,
Where jungle brutes in awe go.
But Murphy says it isn't so:
He caught it in Chicago.

"He's got its 'blue print' in full
And the artist's name that sketched it.
Discovered by Sitting Bull,
The warrior that ketched it.
Also its history in full
Since Dan. O'Leary fetched it.

Now, laugh and wink your eye, just so.
This tale may be forgiven,
And McElhatten's stories go
As far as they are driven.
But when you hear "Ed's" whistle blow,
Look sharp for Number Seven.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed conditions mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by cattarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Joseph Diehl, Herbert Wyland, Philip Holter, Archie Condo, and Harry Wetzel attended a ball game at Beech Creek on Saturday.

Paul Wagner has broken the record for catching large eels in this place, having caught one on Monday morning that measured three feet in length and weighing 3 pounds and 4 ounces. Years ago this would have been considered a very ordinary eel but it seems that the big fellows are about all gone.

Shuman Williams, of Pleasant Gap, visited his parents last week.

A very unsanitary condition of affairs was discovered in "Egypt" recently by some men who were probably looking up the prospects for the huckleberry crop this summer. This hollow is the source of the borough water supply and at some time or other this spring a sheep was killed up there by a dog or dogs and the decomposed carcas was found by the men. In view of the fact that it was found very near the run which feeds the reservoir some very unhealthy conditions might have arisen. An inspection of the run at various times might prove of much benefit.

George Weaver, of Marsh Creek, lost a valuable six-year-old horse last Thursday afternoon, the animal being kicked by a mule which was pasturing in the same field. The mule, which had been newly shod, landed the blow in the horse's side and death followed soon afterward.

Mr. and Mrs. Furst P. Crider of the Bald Eagle Valley greenhouse left Tuesday afternoon on a trip to Philadelphia, New Jersey and New York City. They will be gone a week or ten days.

Contractor H. C. Holter has been awarded the contract for the erection of a dwelling house in State College for Mills Alexandria, of Julian.

John, William and Balser Weber and A. D. Gledhill were visitors in Bellefonte on Tuesday.

Saturday afternoon a chimney at the home of Joseph Smith caught fire and for a few minutes caused some excitement in that part of town, some of the members of the fire company responding to the alarm. About two years ago Mr. Smith's home was destroyed and was rebuilt with the assistance of the charitably inclined people of the town.

Mrs. Worthington, of Muncy, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Schenck.

William P. Woodward, of Pittsburg, was a visitor at the home of his parents this week.

Ronald Welch and Arthur Long were visitors to Lock Haven one day this week.

Mrs. Ward Schenck and daughter Pearl and Mrs. Adam Kline visited in Mill Hall on Tuesday.

Walter Holter has accepted a position as soda water dispenser at Moore's drug store.

Pine Grove Mills.

Quite a number of our young men and women are arriving home for their summer vacations.

The farmers in this vicinity are greatly delighted with the coming of summer. Some of them were beginning to fear that we wouldn't have any summer until next winter.

Howard Wright, accompanied by his mother and sister, was entertained recently at the home of John Wright, at Boalsburg.

Miss Mary Ward, of Pittsburg, has arrived home to spend the summer with her sisters, on Main Street.

Roy S. Goss and wife, of Brookville, are in town.

Helen Duff, of Ennisville, Huntingdon county, was recently entertained at the home of Rev. Mr. Shultz.

Mrs. R. R. Randolph several days ago had the misfortune to fall and injure her head.

George Smith expects to go to State College to farm in the near future.

Mrs. James Ward and children, of Pittsburg, are being entertained at the hospitable home of Grandpa Ward.

Buzz Decker and Luther Fishburn enjoyed a drive to their parental homes on Sunday.

Several autoists spent a short time in town on Sunday——carrying water for their machine.

Those on the sick list include Miss Grace Swabb, who has been confined to her bed for two weeks with quinsy; Mrs. Henry Krebs, who is confined to her bed at the home of her son, David, in the Glades; Mrs. Rebecca Ard, also confined to her bed, and William Tanyer, who has been under the weather for some time.

Rev. Mr. Shultz and William Dale drove to Huntingdon county on Sunday where the former preached a very able sermon.

D. W. Miller, Luther Musser and Willism Kepler recently went to the mountains to fish for a week, but they were so successful that they caught the limited number in three days and, of course, had to return home.

George Dannley and wife departed on Saturday for a week's visit to Manor Hill.

Miss Leah Dunlap, superintendent of the hospital at Norristown, and Miss Kate Dunlap, of Philadelphia, are very welcome visitors at the home of their parents, on Chestnut street.

Mrs. Mattie Jamison, of Bellwood, is spending a very delightful week at the home of Harry W. Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson, of Spruce Creek, recently spent a day with friends here.

Miss Maud Miller is visiting friends in the Lumber City.

Mrs. Dent Peterson visited friends at Stormstown on Friday and Saturday.

Miss Eliza Moore, of Centre Hall, is visiting at the Oliver Shaw home.

Frank Bowersox returned home last week from Philadelphia, where he underwent a surgical operation for a cancerous growth on the lip. He is much improved.

J. T. McCormick and Mrs. George Behrers attended the Mrs. Ira Metchley funeral at Hecla, on Friday.

Rev. J. S. Shultz returned on Saturday from Gettysburg, where he attended the twentieth anniversary of his class.

Next Sunday evening Children's Day services will be held in the Lutheran church; services being at 7.15 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frank are this week visiting relatives about Houtzdale.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lytle attended the Houseman reunion, at Lakemont Park, on Saturday, last.

Last Friday while Mr. and Mrs. Foster Struble and a little boy were driving on Main Street, State College, the horse frightened at an auto and wheeling about threw all of them out on their heads. The buggy was upset and the horse ran away, being caught about one-half mile away. The buggy was a wreck, but fortunately Mr. and Mrs. Struble and the little boy escaped with no broken bones. Mrs. Struble was badly shaken up and had to be removed to her home in a carriage.

Foster Musser is nursing a very sore neck. The trouble first started with eczema, but evidently some poison crept into the wound, which has become quite painful.

J. F. Meyers last week bought the J. B. Ard residence, on Main Street.

Miss Olive Mitchell, of Bellefonte, was in town last week, greeting her many friends of her girlhood days, who were more than delighted to see her.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Neidigh are over at Patton this week, adding their blessing to little Johnnie, a fine young man who lately arrived at the Cronemiller home.

Farmer Charley Homan is receiving congratulations on No. 2, a chubby little boy.

Frank Knochie came up from Harrisburg last week to look over his earthly possessions in Centre County, only to find crops not progressing very rapidly, especially corn that presents a delicate appearance and a poor stand. Cut worms are playing havoc here.

Last Thursday while G. W. McWilliams was riding in a wagon, he in some way lost his balance and fell to the ground, injuring his hip so as to necessitate his going to bed. He is somewhat better at this writing.

The I. O. O. F. hall is being painted a light steel color, with white trimmings. D. W. Meyers and Cramer have the job.

In our letter last week we noted the illness of Mrs. Harry Walker, and now we regret to say that her condition is extremely critical.

Deer seem plenty. Last week two young deer were in pasture with the Clayton Struble cattle. Some weeks ago Farmer Bert Musser, on going to the barn one morning, found a deer among the cattle in the barnyard. It is needless to say that the deer soon found its way to the mountain.

Miss Laura Miller, is visiting in the Branch and at State College, where she has been elected to succeed Miss Ella Livingston as teacher.

Last Friday a terrific storm, with rain and hail combined, passed over the Baileyville district, washing fields and roads and most of Postmaster Archey's garden was swept down the Juniata. A ball of lightning struck J. C. Gates' large shed, splintering some of the trees nearby. The Powley building was struck and burned down.

The Ferguson township school borad met at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon and elected the following teachers: Pine Grove Grammar, H. M. Charles Stitzer, Lyman Emerick's right hand man, quietly slipped away on Saturday evening on the Bellefonte Central, and he did not go alone.

John Harringer and Walter Parsons spent Friday in Bellefonte. No doubt Walter was buying fireworks for that new boy of his, and John was inspecting the court house with an eye on a certain office.

Milesburg.

Miss Marcella Boggs has returned from a two weeks' vacation spent in Philadelphia and Ocean City.

C. Lane Boggs, of Pittsburg, is at present visiting his father A. T. Boggs and family.

Milton Johnson, contractor of Bellefonte, took in the game of ball here on Saturday.

The ball game on Saturday won by our team over Central City by the score of 5 to 3 was a well played game and both teams deserve credit. Both sides went into the game with spirit and with all confidence of winning, and everything moved along nicely. This is the kind of base ball our fans want. The more they knock the harder our boys play. Let the knocker sing.

The Willing Workers of the Baptist church will hold a festival Saturday evening, June 25, on the Water street lawn. Come and bring your friends to the second outdoor social of the season. The best of ice cream will be served and cake and candy will be for sale, also a fine line of aprons made by the society.

Frank Campbell, of Renovo, is at present visiting at the home of his father W. R. Campbell.

James Wallace is rejoicing over the arrival of a big baby girl.

It seems that everybody is arranging to spend the 4th of July at home. The manager of the ball team, Mr. Quick, is planning two games of ball for that day and we will try to furnish amusement for all. Let everyone join in for a sane 4th of July.

W. W. Smith has bought the Bullock carriage works of Milesburg and is now ready to do all kinds of carriage work and painting. Having had 15 years experience in one of the best shops in the county he has the right place to paint automobiles. Give him a call.

Misses Bessie Bryan and Margaret Baird returned home on Saturday from Clearfield where they attended the Epworth League convention as delegates. Both report a delightful trip.

At a meeting of the school board recently the following officers were elected for the year: O. E. Miles president; W. B. Thomas secretary, and W. H. Musser treasurer.

The Epworth League cleared about $14.00 at their festival Saturday evening. They wish to thank the public for their patronage.

Ice cream delivered to any part of the town, wholesale and retail to dealers and festivals. See Hugg.

Edgar Miles spent the early part of the week in Williamsport.

John Shultz is looking happy the last few days, we suppose thinking over that new baby girl.

Ross Wallace is working on a brick contract in State College this week.

Roy Jones, the carpenter, third baseman and batsman, says he can play ball best when there are lots of good looking girls at the game, especially when they wear red hair.

We hope to be able in the future to build a pavilion on the ball grounds in the way of a grandstand in three sections —one for good base ball fans, one for good rooters and the other for knockers.

Mrs. Edward Walker, of East Orange, N. J., is circulating among her many friends in town this week.

Clarence Spicer, of Bloomsburg, is spending a few days among his many friends in town this week.

Yarnell.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Malone, Benjamin Fetzer and Chester Wellers spent Sunday at Wm. Shawley's.

Misses Anna Park and Edna Thompson and brother, of Snow Shoe, called at the Lewis home, on Sunday, and also attended church services.

Miss Essie Viehdorfer, a postoffice clerk at Irwin, and Miss Maude Viehdorfer, a student at the State Normal School, at Lock Haven, are enjoying their vacation at home.

Mrs. Nannie Beates and son, Jarves, of Steubenville, Ohio, are guests at the Beates home here.

Miss Susie Daugherty has returned after a twelve weeks term as a student at Bianchard seminary.

Gilbert Rider, of Keywadin, was a visitor at the Daugherty home over Sunday.

A number of our young folks attended Children's Day services at Karthaus on Sunday evening.

Mrs. Sallie Boak was a Philipsburg visitor one day last week.

Benner Walker, of Centre Hall, was a business visitor here recently.

Mrs. Carson, of Snow Shoe, visited friends here on Thursday, last.

The friends here of Willie Lewis, formerly of this place, but now of Jersey Shore, were shocked to learn of his sudden death. The brother and sisters here went to Jersey Shore for the funeral. It was not known here that the young man was ill. His death resulted from an operation for appendicitis. He was a young man in the prime of life and his death is greatly regretted. Surviving are a loving wife and two dear little daughters, Anna and Leona, and also a father, mother and several sisters and brothers.

Mt. Eagle.

While working in the handle factory, on Wednesday of last week, Claire Gates had a thumb badly torn by a saw.

Frank Dietz, who is convalescent, drove to Howard, on Saturday, accompanied by his daughter, Maude.

Mrs. Ward Daughenbaugh, and daughter, Miss Julia, were in Howard on Friday, last, attending to some shopping.

ADVICE ON TAR MACADAM ROADS

Suggestions For Constructing Highways of This Material.

MUCH DEPENDS ON LOCALITY.

Highway Engineer Should Be Consulted and Given the Data Bearing on the Problem—Topography of Country and Traffic Should Be Studied.

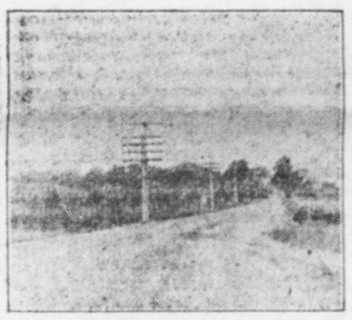
As many industrious members of various rural communities are anxious to receive information as to what kind of tar macadam roads to build, an expert authority on road construction and maintenance gives the following valuable advice:

The proper determination of what kind of tar macadam road to build in a given locality could only be made by a competent highway engineer in possession of all the data bearing on the problem and preferably by an examination on the ground.

Leaving for the moment the matter of cost out of the question, the selection of a suitable method of construction and of materials best adapted thereto depends upon so many factors that no choice is possible without thorough study of the surrounding conditions. This would include a knowledge of the location of the road, its grades, the topography of the country through which it runs, the climatic conditions and especially of the traffic to which it is subjected.

A construction that would give satisfactory results in one section of the country might be entirely unsuited to another section, and in the same manner materials used successfully in a warm climate might fail in one where extreme cold prevailed during a part of the year.

When, as is almost always the case, low cost is the controlling consideration, still other factors are introduced into the problem, and still more data are required for its proper solution. The question then becomes one not of building the best possible road, but of building the best possible road that can be built for the money available. While it is not a simple matter to answer the first question, yet it is comparatively simple as contrasted with the second, and it is just here that the services of a specialist are indispensable.



IDEAL STRETCH OF MACADAM.
[From Good Roads Magazine, New York.]

It is seldom that the available funds are sufficient to pay for the best possible road, and it is necessary to sacrifice in the construction to keep within the limits of the available funds. Such weighing of cost and quality and the final decision as to what is the best and most economical procedure require not only careful thought, but also a thorough familiarity with the whole subject of road building and maintenance.

There are many road binders composed principally of tar, besides the several tars themselves, that are employed in road building. Their use has been attended by both success and failure, neither being necessarily an index of the value of the material, for the selection with due regard to conditions to be met and the manipulation in the actual work affects results fully as much as any inherent qualities of the materials.

As in most work of a similar nature, the best results are to be expected when a material and method of construction are chosen which have given satisfaction in a case similar to the particular one under discussion; hence in the last analysis the most reliable information is to be gained from service tests of roads subjected to the same outside influences as that which is to be built.

Remove the Mud Tax Burden.

No plan for spring work is complete which does not include dragging the roads. If this is attended to at the proper time it insures good roads for the season and removes the larger share of that awful burden, the mud tax. In this matter the towns and cities are equally interested with the farmers, and their co-operation is not generally hard to secure if the matter is handled rightly. Road dragging is one of those things that must be secured through co-operation if widespread benefits are to be enjoyed.

Prosperity Follows Good Roads.

You show me any community in this or any other state where there are good roads, said a speaker at a good roads convention, and I will show you a community where there are no paint famished buildings or tottering leantos, a community where there is the air of prosperity, thrift and progression.

OUR FIRST MINT.

Some of Its Curious Old Rules and Regulations.

The first United States mint at Philadelphia was naturally a very unpretentious affair. The material for coinage was secured from abroad. There was found much difficulty to get any one of experience to operate the coinage, and the salary list of the first mint employees was: David Rittenhouse, director, $2,000 per annum; Tristram Dalton, treasurer, $1,200; Henry Voight, coiner, $1,500; Isaac Hugh, clerk, $312.

The regular coinage of copper began in 1793, silver in 1794 and gold in 1795. The following curious extracts are taken from the mint rules and regulations of the early days:

"The allowance under the name of drink money is hereafter to be discontinued.

"The operations of the mint throughout the year are to commence at 5 o'clock in the morning.

"Christmas day and the Fourth of July—and no other days—are established holidays at the mint.

"He (watchman) will keep in a proper arm chest, securely locked, a musket and bayonet, two pistols and a sword.

"The watchman must attend from 6 o'clock in the evening to 5 o'clock in the morning, must ring the yard bell every hour and send the watchdog through the yard immediately after ringing the bell."

Besides the Philadelphia mint, which is now established in palatial quarters at Seventeenth and Spring Garden streets, there are mints at San Francisco, Denver and New Orleans and an assay office at Carson City.

OLD LONDON BRIDGE.

It Linked the Twelfth Century With the Eighteenth.

For centuries old London bridge, with its double row of houses, was the home of generations who lived and traded over the Thames waters.

Holbein lived and painted there. Osborne, the prentice lad, leaped through a window in the house of his master, Sir William Hewet, to the rescue of Sir William's daughter, who had fallen into the swollen flood of the river below, and by winning her for his wife laid the foundation of the ducal house of Leeds. Crispin Tucker had his shop on the bridge, to which Pope and Swift and many another author of fame made pilgrimages to purchase books and gossip with the waggish shopkeeper. Crocker's Dictionary was printed "at the Looking Glass on London bridge," and gigantic corn mills dominated the south end of the structure, not many yards from the wonderful Nonsuch House, a huge wooden pile with turrets and cupolas brought from Holland.

Such in brief outline was the London bridge which linked the twelfth with the eighteenth century and which when it was on its last tottering legs was removed to give place to its fine successor of our day, the stone in which is said to be "nearly double that employed in building St. Paul's cathedral."—Montreal Standard.

His Danger.

In these days of almost pre-eminent German music and musicians it is rather amusing to read the opinions of former generations concerning Teutonic singers.

Frederick the Great was so impolitely unpatriotic as to declare that he would rather hear the neighing of a horse than the singing of a German prima donna. Perhaps in his day there was some excuse for such a remark, but the times have changed.

There is a diverting anecdote of an Italian who was convinced that no German could sing. A friend induced him to go to the opera where Henriette Sontag sang. After hearing her first aria the Italian got up to go. The friend urged him to stay, assuring him that he would be convinced soon.

"I know it," repied the Italian, "and that's why I go."

Doves and Coronations.

At the ancient ceremonies of coronation of the French kings after the anointing had been performed some white doves were let loose in the church. This was supposed to symbolize the power of the Holy Ghost in directing the king's actions. A similar idea seems to have inspired all early kings, for among the English regalia is the rod of equity or the scepter with the dove. This is simply a golden rod with a mound at the top, which supports a cross. On this cross is a dove, fashioned of white enamel, with expanded wings. Some fine diamonds ornament the rod in various places.

Gender of Garlic.

"Why is garlic masculine gender?" asked the man who markets. "It must be masculine because the greengrocers I buy from call it 'he.' They are mostly Italians and ought to know the sex of garlic if anybody does. Of all the vegetables and aromatic herbs I buy garlic is the only one to which masculine virtues are ascribed. Everything else is neuter. To call garlic 'it' would be an insult. The garlic, he is fresh, he is fine, he is cheap, he is dear. Funny, isn't it?"—New York Times.

He Had Quit.

"You say you have quit smoking?"

"Then why don't you throw away those cigars?"

"Never! I threw away a box of good cigars the last time I quit smoking, and it taught me a lesson."—Houston Post.

The King's Surgeon

Story of an Escape From the Guillotine During the French Revolution.

By MOLLIE K. WETHERELL.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

One evening—it was the latter part of the eighteenth century—a carriage stopped at the door of an inn midway between Versailles and Paris. A gentleman whose dress and manner denoted that he was of some importance alighted, entered the inn, where the landlord stood obsequiously rubbing his hands, and ordered a supper. While it was being prepared the landlord was hopping about, now running into the kitchen to hurry up the cook and now returning to the gentleman to assure him that he would not have long to wait.

Meanwhile the gentleman went out on to the piazza for the purpose of stretching his legs during his halt. He found there something that interested him—a boy about sixteen years old, pale and emaciated, sitting in an invalid chair. The gentleman approached him and began to question him.

"You do not seem well. What is your trouble?"

"My right leg is drawn up, and I cannot straighten it. My back, too, is getting crooked."

"How long since this trouble came upon you?"

"Since a year ago when the young Marquis of Treville kicked me."

The gentleman's brow lowered. At that moment supper was announced, and he went into the dining room.

"Who is the boy outside with hip disease and spine curvature?" he asked of the landlord, who waited on him.

"He is my son, seigneur."

"He has a fine head and an intellectual face. It is a pity that he should suffer thus. He would if relieved make a good man."

"It was that little villain Treville."

"If you will send him to me at Paris I will see if I cannot straighten his leg and prevent the further curvature of his spine. I am the king's surgeon."

"If you will do that, M. le Docteur, we will all bless you, but I fear I have not so much money as you will expect."

"There will be no money to pay. I am going direct to Paris, and if you like I will take your boy with me in my carriage. He will travel more comfortably and be less liable to injury than if he is carried in one of your country wagons."

When the doctor was driving away, beside him, made comfortable with pillows and rugs, sat Jean Demaurier. That night he was placed in a hospital, and the next morning Dr. Du Faur began a course of treatment.

During the next dozen or fifteen years the American colonists had thrown off the kingly yoke and become an independent people with a government of their own. The French, who for centuries had been bled by their kings and their nobles, ground down to the very earth, encouraged by the Americans' example, had begun to turn upon their oppressors. One day a mob marched by the inn where Dr. Du Faur had stopped for supper, going to Versailles to bring the king to Paris. Jean Demaurier had forgiven the young noble who had kicked him, but he had not forgotten that so great was the power of the aristocrats that he had not dared resent his treatment. He had thrown himself into the cause of the revolution, and when the people marched by his farm he joined them. Then when they came back with the king in his carriage Jean continued on with them to Paris, where he became one of the minor leaders.

Then began that reign of terror based on a determination on the part of a people who had suffered oppression for centuries to wipe their oppressors from the face of the earth. In the Place de la Revolution they sat up a machine for carrying out their work. The prisons were filled with aristocrats, consisting of nobles and their sympathizers, and whenever the doors opened out poured a crowd who were to be eliminated by the guillotine from the problem of French politics.

Dr. Du Faur was not noble, but his wife was or had been, for he was a widower, and his daughter had married the young Count Destelles at the breaking out of the revolution. The doctor, having been the royal surgeon, was deemed of more importance than the other two and was arrested among the first. The arrest of his daughter and his son-in-law soon followed.

One morning the doctor was brought up before the citizen judge of his arrondissement for what was called a trial. The doctor saw a man apparently not yet thirty sitting behind a pine table who was to be his judge. The man looked at the doctor, and it was evident that some commotion was going on within the former's brain.

And well there might. The judge whose duty it was to find the prisoner guilty and send him to the guillotine was none other than Jean Demaurier, whom the doctor had found a cripple and made a strong man. Demaurier was a trifle bent and walked with a slight limp, but he was a very different man from what he would have been had it not been for the efforts of the surgeon. The judge gave one look at the man who had been sent to him that he might sign his death warrant, then, lowering his eyes to a sheet of paper before him, began to question him and take down his answers. For his own life he dare not favor his benefactor.

"Your name?" he asked.

"Alphonse Du Faur."

"Occupation?"

"Surgeon."

"I believe it is you who have kept the tyrant Louis Capet and his family from the grave where they should have laid long ago."

"I was the king's physician."

Those standing about scowled and expected that the next words would be "Take him to the guillotine!"

"And do you think," continued the judge, "that you who have kept alive this oppressor of the people should die the same death as other aristocrats?"

The doctor did not answer the question.

"Take him to the temporary prison in the Rue Veau Grand. I wish to consult the committee to learn if it is their pleasure that this man, who has been closer than any other in the confidence of the tyrant, shall die an ordinary death. He should be burned."

These words were spoken with all the bitterness the citizen judge could throw into them. Not one present suspected that his intention was to save Dr. Du Faur from the guillotine that morning and to place him where he might get access to him with a view to saving him altogether. The doctor was taken to the building mentioned, and another prisoner was brought up for condemnation.

The next morning Citizen Demaurier drove up in a cart to the prison where the doctor was confined and presented an order for him signed by the committee. The doctor was placed in the cart, and Demaurier, telling the officials that he needed no guard for the prisoner, being himself well armed, drove away. Pursuing his way down the street, he soon reached the river bank and the outskirts of Paris. Then he stopped and said to his prisoner:

"You do not know me, M. le Docteur?"

"You are the citizen judge."

"More than that. I am Jean Demaurier."

"And who is Jean Demaurier?"

"Have you done so many kindnesses as to forget those you have benefited? Do you not remember stopping for supper on your way from Versailles at an inn one evening fifteen years ago? There you found a boy who had been crippled by a noble. You took him to Paris and made quite a respectable figure of him. See, I scarcely limp."

He got down from the cart and walked back and forth.

"And you are that boy?" exclaimed the doctor.

"I am."

"What are you going to do with me?"

"Take you in my carriage—this cart—to the inn from which you took me to Paris in your carriage and not only save your back and your leg, but especially your neck. I shall hide you there as long as necessary and then run you over the border."

"You are very kind, but I do not care to leave my daughter and my son-in-law here to die."

"Where are they?"

"In the conciergerie, I believe."

"Very well; I shall see what I can do for them. I am thoroughly trusted, being known as the man who was crippled by a noble. I will take you to my home, return and possibly may bring those you love with me."

"But will I not be missed and you be charged with setting me free?"

"I think not. They have so many heads to chop off that the moment a prisoner disappears he is saved. If I am asked about you I will tell them you have been tortured and executed in private. Now lie down in the cart, and I will drive on."

Jean, before reaching his home, where his load was likely to be seen by his neighbors, stopped beside a field where there was grain in sheaf and put enough over his burden to conceal him, then drove on and turned in at his farm by a lane leading to the barn.

The doctor remained concealed in the loft of Demaurier's barn for a week. Meanwhile Demaurier was in Paris, endeavoring to find the Count and Countess Destailles. They had become separated, and Demaurier spent considerable time discovering where they were. Then after much difficulty he succeeded in getting possession of them. This he accomplished by bribing their jailer, and on pretense of removing them to another prison he took them to his inn, but this time the journey was accomplished at the dead of night. The meeting between the doctor and his daughter and her husband at midnight in the loft of a barn, though they could only distinguish one another by their voices, was indescribably happy.

The next morning Jean Demaurier put the three refugees in a deep farm wagon, in the bottom of which he had bored breathing holes, and covered them to the depth of several feet with grain. Then, opening his barn, he drove out and into the road, soon after turning into another leading northward. On that road he jogged with his load till evening, when he relieved the refugees from their uncomfortable position, and they slept in a wood. They dare not take any other conveyance, fearing to be recognized, so the next day they kept to their cart, traveling as grain, and at last crossed the border. There they knelt and, locked in one another's arms, gave thanks to heaven.

Jean returned to Paris. He was eventually guillotined, but, strangely enough, not for assisting in the escape of the doctor and his family. His fall was on account of one of those changes wherein one faction came up to dominate another.

WILL GET BETTER ROADS.

Resort Men In Monroe County to Provide Highways For Motorists.

An important meeting of proprietors of hotels of the resorts throughout the county was held at Stroudsburg, Pa., recently, at which it was decided to boom the region as it has never been boomed before. The manner in which this is to be accomplished is by the generous use of printer's ink in the newspapers of the great cities. These men realize that in order to keep the resorts prominently to the fore this move is necessary, and the manner in which all the members responded to the calls for subscriptions is the very best evidence that they are heart and soul in the proposition to make 1910 the banner season.

At the meeting another matter of much importance was taken up and discussed—the question of good roads. This is not a new subject, but it was given a new impetus by the action of the resort men, who directed J. B. Williams, the president of the Monroe County Resort association, to appoint a committee to confer and lay plans to greatly improve the roads in the county. It is especially important at this time because of the fact that the Scranton Automobile club is interested in the improvements in the roads of this section of the county. In fact, the Scranton club has taken a step to assist in bringing about the improvement by material aid to rebuild the road traversing the Paradise section of the county.

The club wants the assistance of the people of the region in the proposition and this it is assured of receiving. The committee to be appointed by Mr. Williams is to work in the interest of the movement, which will be appreciated by the visitors to the county and the motoring fraternity, who come here in such great numbers, being attracted by the beauties of the county.

The action of the association to improve road conditions has created more interest in the season about to open, the resort men being of the opinion that if the plans of the committee are successful the region will become still more popular and in consequence will attract many more people to this section.

When the season of 1910 opens everything will be found to be in readiness for the proper accommodation of visitors, who take so much pleasure in staying within the borders of the county to while away the heated season. With good roads, which are assured, and a proper publicity campaign the people believe that all records will be eclipsed.

GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN.

Highway Commission Reappointed In Ventura, Cal.

The supervisors in preparation for proposed bond issues in Ventura, Cal., have reappointed as county commissioners Messrs. Clark, Edmundson and Fleisher. This commission was appointed two years ago and went thoroughly into the question of good roads throughout the county, furnishing specifications and an estimate.

But the financial depression came on, work was dropped and the commission discharged. Since then agitation has been started for a renewal, and a proposition has been set on foot to bond the county for $1,000,000 for good roads and a number of bridges. The commission is empowered to again retain Surveyor Wand at a salary of not to exceed $400 per month.

The matter of a choice of a courthouse site in Ventura has been selected by the supervisors. Citizens have raised a purse of $20,000 with which to buy a site, the location being left to the supervisors. Two sites have already been offered.

Why Not Pass the Plate?

They ought to pass the plate at church weddings. It comes natural to do it in church, and to do so would add a pretty and useful employment to the duties of the ushers, who always have a little spare time before the bride arrives. And, really, getting married is more expensive than ever, and, though wedding presents are excellent in their way, what the young people usually need the most is cash. Instead of the list of gifts which the newspapers sometimes print we should read, "The collection yielded $4,000,000." That would be nice. It is much easier to store and care for money than plate and glass! And money always fits and there is no such thing as an embarrassing duplication of dollars.—Life.

He Saved the Patent Office.

When in the war of 1812 the British, who had taken Washington, trained their guns upon the patent office, Dr. Thornton, throwing himself directly before the guns, cried:

"Are you Englishmen or Goths and Vandals? This is the patent office—a depository of the ingenuity and inventions of the American nation, in which the whole civilized world is interested. Would you destroy it? Then let the charge pass through my body."

And the building was spared. Twenty-four years afterward, however, it was destroyed by fire, together with everything in it.

The Harm of Damp Houses.

It is dangerous to health and even to life in a damp, moldy house or one built over a moldy cellar. Many years ago the London Lancet in an article on diphtheria traced the disease in certain cases to the presence of certain molds and fungoid growths which seemed to be breathed into the throat. Remember, one of the best disinfectants is lime. Moldy cloths, such as shoes and other articles that are unfit for use, should be destroyed at once.

Only a Question of Possibility.

Among the customers of a tea store opened in the northwest part of the city the other night was a man who, after buying a pound of coffee, handed a counterfeit half dollar to the shopkeeper.

"This money is counterfeit; I'm sorry, sir," said the shopkeeper.

"Yes; I know it," replied the customer, grinning. "Got it here one day last week, and I've been saving it for you." Then, noting the smile upon the shopkeeper's face, the customer said, evidently offended, "Perhaps you doubt my word?"

"Oh, not at all, sir; not at all. I couldn't doubt the word of so truthful a man. I was simply smiling because I wondered how it was possible for you to have got the money here. This place was opened only night before last."

Thereupon the customer departed hastily after producing a good coin and slipping the counterfeit into his own pocket.—Philadelphia Times.

Lancashire Humor.

There was a Lancashire collier who went out on Sunday with his wheelbarrow because, as he said, "I've lost mi dog, an' a felly looks sich a foo' gooin' a-walkin' bi hisself."

Then there was the workingmen's club committee which wanted to indorse the accounts "audited and found correct and tuppence over" and the customer who, on being told that the price of candles had gone up owing to the war, asked whether they were "feighdin' bi candle leet."

Also one recalls the haggard Lancashire lover who, when asked for a kiss, said he was "gooin' to do it in a bit," and the old ladies who praised a certain Darwin clergyman as "a grand burier," and of the orator who translated "Dieu et mon droit" into "Evil be to him what evil thinks!"—"Lancashire Life and Character," by Frank Ormerod.

CHANGES IM ARMY LIFE

Under System of Promotions Old Social Conditions are Modified.

That the social life of an army post differs from that of any other locality where are gathered together a number of men and women of a similar class is due to a variety of causes, says Gwendolen Overton, in The Delinator. Chief among them is the fact that militarism may already be looked upon as belonging to a vanquishing order, as being a surviaal of a past age.

A rather regrettable change in social relations has been brought about since 1898, when the old system of regimental promotion was abolished. It has practically put an end to the life-long companionships which resulted from officers being stationed together, year after year. Now there is a meeting and friendship for a time, then promotion sends a man into another regiment, into another department, to a far corner of the globe, and the separation is very possibly permanent. There is much more thought of earning a living and much less sentiment of the service than in other days.

Another change lies in the fact that officers work harder as a steady thing during times of peace than was formerly the case. They are also forced to become something of the student. Of old, a man was none the less a good officer if he could with difficulty express himself in comprehensible English, but today he must be a marching encylopaedia of abstruse knowledge. There is less time, therefore, to be devoted to playing the 'squire of dames, and men are less the companion of their women-folk.

Yet, even so, the army woman sees far more of man's society than her sister in civil life - just as she usually manages to see more of the real and stirring world.

TREATMENT OF CORNS

Application of Moisture—Use of Glycerin and Water.

A corn is not a callosity, although often so called, for the two things are produced in different ways. A callosity is due to pressure intermittently applied; a corn is due to more or less constant pressure combined with friction. A callosity is superficial; a corn is well described in its Latin name, clavus, a nail. It is like a nail driven into the tender tissues of the lower layers of the skin and the parts beneath.

Paring a corn, the usual treatment may give a little relief for a time by relieving the pressure, but soon the horny growth is pushed above the surface again, and the condition is as bad as ever, or worse.

The only lasting benefit is from the removal of the entire growth, and this is best effected by the application of moisture. Every night the sufferer should go to bed with a thin poultice or a wad of absorbent cotton saturated with glycerine and water on the corn, the surface before the application being thickly dusted with bicarbonate of soda. In the daytime an ordinary corn plaster should be worn, and in the hole should be placed a very thin layer of absorbent cotton soaked in glycerine.

This simple treatment is better than the use of salicylic acid, glacial acetic acid and other chemicals, which are often recommended. Simple rest in bed will do just as well, but it takes longer. In fact, a good, long illness, such as typhoid fever, may be depended upon to cure any corn. It is the only good thing to be said of typhoid fever.

Of course, after the corn has disappeared, better-fitting shoes must be worn, so that none of the prominent parts of the foot are pressed upon and and rubbed by the leather at the same time. If the badly-fitting shoe is put on again the corns will quite certainly come back.—Youth's Companion.

Where Everyone is Related.

The Andorrans are very proud of their blue blood and ancient lineage; in their eyes a "gavache" (foreign) of any description or nationality is merely an inferior being, a sort mushroom upstart in comparison with themselves. During 1200 years they have continually married and intermarried to such an extent that at present all the inhabitants are practically cousins; yet, strange to say, neither their physical, mental, nor moral qualities seem to have suffered. Both sexes are strong-limbed, broad-shouldered bright-eyed, hardy, and long-lived, retaining their hair and their teeth to a green old age; they are also keen-witted and intelligent, alert and happy-hearted, sober, industrious, hospitable and devout.

The feminine Andorran has not a vestige of coquetry about her; she is just the female pure and simple. She is a thrifty housewife, a helpmate to her husband in the most literal sense of the term; ready and able to trudge off across mountain and valley beside him with a pack of smuggled goods on her back in case of need.-Wide World Magazine.

His Athletic Neighbor.

A young man inmate of a boarding house had been disturbed night after night by the boarder in the next room doing things with a punching bag he'd rigged up in the room some way. At breakfast each morning the young man would look over the crowd and wonder who the bag puncher might be, but there was no one in sight but a bunch of women and eight or ten men with narrow chests and retreating chins. One night he made up his mind to knock on the bag punching roomer's door and ask him to put over his exercise until daylight when all the world's awake. The man might be small enough to bulldoze even with all his athletics. The door opened and there, clad in a tight fitting red jersey, was a robust, buxom woman of perhaps thirty summers.

"And what did you say to her?" the young man was asked.

"I was so startled," replied he, "that I asked what afterward seemed to me the most natural request I could have made. I asked her if she'd lend me a couple of matches."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Persistency of Colds.

Why is it that we are so heavily subject to colds? Other epidemic diseases—measles, typhoid, scarlet fever, diphtheria—may get hold on us once and there is an end; it is not usual to have any of them twice. We brew in our blood immunity. The poison of the disease evokes in us its proper antidote. Our blood cells make a sort of natural antitoxin and keep it in stock, so that we are henceforth protected against the disease. A well vaccinated nurse, for example, works with safety in a smallpox hospital, where the very air is infective, but her blood is so changed by vaccination that the smallpox cannot affect her. By scarlet fever, again, we are, as it were, vaccinated against scarlet fever. The reaction of our blood against the disease immunizes us. No such result follows influenza or a common cold. We brew nothing that is permanent. We are just as susceptible to a later invasion as we were to the invasion that is just over.—London Spectator.

The Festive Codfish.

A correspondent of the New York Post says that the codfish frequents "the tablelands of the sea." The codfish no doubt does this to secure as nearly as possible a dry, bracing atmosphere. This pure air of the submarine tablelands gives to the codfish that breadth of chest and depth of lungs that we have so often noticed. The glad, free smile of the codfish is largely attributed to the exhilaration of this oceanic altitoodleum. The correspondent further says that the "cod fish subsists largely on the sea cherry." Those who have not had the pleasure of seeing the codfish climb the cherry tree in search of food or clubbing the fruit from the heavily laden branches with chunks of coral have missed a very fine sight. The codfish when at home rambling through the submarine forests does not wear his vest unbuttoned as he does while loafing around the grocery stores of the United States.—Bill Nye.

A High Priced Fricassee.

Lord Alvanley, a noted wit and high liver in England a hundred years or so ago, insisted on having an apple tart on his dinner table every day throughout the year. On one occasion he paid a caterer $1,000 for a luncheon put up in a basket that sufficed a small boating party going up the Thames. Being one of a dozen men dining together at a London club where each was required to produce his own dish, Alvanley's, as the most expensive, won him the advantage of being entertained free of cost. This benefit was gained at an expense of $540, that being the price of a simple fricassee composed entirely of the "noix," or small pieces at each side of the back, taken from thirteen kinds of birds, among them being 100 snipe, 40 woodcocks and 20 pheasants—in all about 300 birds.

Our Eccentric Phrases.

Why do we always talk of putting on a coat and vest? Who puts on a coat before a vest? We also say putting on shoes and stockings. Who puts on shoes before the stockings? We also put up signs telling people to wipe their feet when we mean their boots or shoes. And a father tells a boy he will warm his jacket when he means to warm his pantaloons. We are a little eccentric in our phrases at times.

An Odd Epitaph.

The following epitaph is to be found in a cemetery within seven miles of New York's city hall:

For what I am this crumbling clay insures,
And what I was is no affair of yours.

ALAS, THEY KEPT NO CHICK.

A wiggling worm, so green and fat,
On a lettuce leaf in a sunbeam sat.
A plump, pretty maid named Mary Ann
Gathered that lettuce in her dishpan.

She washed that lettuce, crisp and green,
But the wiggling wormlet was not seen.
She dressed that sass for the dinner hour
With hard boiled eggs and vinegar sour.

But the worm squirmed out on the tablecloth,
And that made the boss just awful wroth.
He kicked that table hard and good
And knocked it into kindling wood.

Then in rushed a cop with a hickory stick
And whacked the boss an awful lick.
He got the limit of the law,
While wife went bawling home to ma.

A chick would have saved that man from jail,
A chick would have saved that sad finale,
For with chicks around no worm can squirm,
For the early chick gets the fat green worm.

BREAKING BROODIES.

Grandma tried to scare cluckin' out of her "settin'" hens by clipping off their conclusion, but the bobtailed broodies didn't conclude—they "sot" on. Grandpa took the screechers by the neck and ducked 'em in the waterin' trough, but that didn't often cool their ardor. Now John Bughouse says: "Jist pen 'em up in the dark fur four days with no feed or water. That'll fetch 'em."

But no Bughouse tactics in our coop. If such cruel treatment doesn't kill the hen it retards her quick return to laying, and that's what we don't want.

Broody hens are often broken by simply turning them on the green or placing them in a pen where there is no nest or nesting material and putting them on the roost after dark.

If you have birds of Leghorn style just tie a two foot red flannel streamer to their tails. They will be scared out of clucking quick. If you have a turkey gobbler handy turn him on the scene, and when he sees that flaunting flannel you'll view the most amusing moving picture show you've seen. Heavy breeds aren't affected by this trick. They consider the ribbon an ornament to their peroration.

Many place their broodies in a box with a slat bottom. The air circulating under them cools their fever.

An easy way is to place the broody with a snappy cockerel. He will make life lively for her. A screech and off they go. He will chase her up a tree. His impetuosity will cause her such strenuosity that she will be so busy trying to escape him that the soft nest and downy chicks will be forgotten, and the exercise will do her good.

DON'TS.

Don't make a fattening crate with a solid floor and top. Slat top for ventilation; slat bottom, sanitation.

Don't believe that concrete causes corns on the feet. Nothing fitter than concrete and litter.

Don't sacrifice the paying qualities of your fowls to get pretty form and feathers. Feathers may win at the show, but money makes the mare go.

Don't forget that private trade is best, especially for eggs right from the nest.

Don't get too scientific, that's nit; be up to date, have common sense, that's it.

Don't hide away knowledge if just back from college, but prove your theories in private before you give them to the universe. You may have a block of laughingstock.

Don't think when you cheat a man through the mail that you are not driving a nail into your business finale.

BERNICE ALLEN.

Chorus Girl With Wonderful Hair.

MISS BERNICE ALLEN.

The illustration shows the picture of Bernice Allen, the "littlest girl" in the chorus of "The Skylark," a musical production which is likely to amuse Gothamites all summer.

This small lady is only four feet eleven inches high, but the most wonderful thing about Miss Allen is her hair, which measures several inches longer than her petite self.

When asked what hair tonics, lotions and revitalizers, preparations most women have resource to, she used Bernice Allen airily remarked. "Why, like Topsy, it jes' growed."

The following are Miss Allen's rules for care of the hair:

First.—Brush your hair every night and morning with a long bristle brush with ample space between.

Second.—Wash your hair not oftener than once every four weeks, using the best soap. Dry the hair thoroughly in the old fashioned way, avoiding electric fans and heated air, both of which tend to dry up the oil ducts at the roots.

Third.—Give your hair plenty of sunshine.

Fourth.—Avoid doing your hair up tightly and never use sharply pointed hairpins.

Fifth.—When retiring arrange your hair in two loose braids.

Sixth.—Massage the scalp with the finger tips very gently for ten minutes before doing the hair up for the night

How Noah Used His Time.

The scene was a Scotch schoolroom. A class was being examined in Scripture knowledge by his majesty's inspector.

"Can any boy or girl tell me how Noah would be likely to use his time while in the ark?" he asked.

There was silence for some time, but at length one boy timidly showed his hand, and on being asked what he thought replied:

"Please, sir, he wad fish."

"Well, yes, he might," admitted the inspector.

Presently another little fellow was seen to wave his hand excitedly, and on being asked to speak said:

"Please, he couldna fish verra lang."

"What makes you think so, my little man?" asked the inspector.

"Because there were only two worms in the ark," was the reply.

Teaches Correct Speech.

A woman of culture and travel has made a glorious success teaching correct speech. It is surprising how much incorrect speech there is among our educated people. They cling to provincialisms, incorrect pronunciations, wrong use of words and unmusical intonations. The Southerner holds to the soft, r- utterance of his "mammy" days; the Middle-Westerner flattens all his vowels; the Bostonian throws his r's completely out of joint.

This woman undertook to correct such errors and teach a pure, perfect, English speech to a few young women. She was compelled to start a school of correct English which has grown to great proportions. The particularly promising field is open to every town in America. The Delineator.

Had Snakes in His Hair.

The hair of the Indian yogi or religious mendicant, owing to long years of neglect, becomes matted together in a fashion more easy to imagine than to describe, and certainly could not be brushed out. It is of very great length, and when allowed to hang down trails on the ground. "One night," writes a correspondent in the Wide World Magazine, "one of these yogis was sleeping under a tree, when a snake wormed its way into his tangled coiffure, and he had quite a difficult task to get rid of it in the morning."

What a Summer Cold May Do.

A summer cold if neglected is just as apt to develop into bronchitis or pneumonia as at any other season. Do not neglect it. Take Foley's Honey and Tar promptly. It loosens the cough, soothes and heals the inflamed air passages, and expels the cold from the system." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys, Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling Etc

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscles weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for those troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this Dr. A. E. Robinson, "K" 325 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich, and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has a great healing and pain-conquering power

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

William Scholl and wife, of Jersey City, N. J., have been visiting for the last week at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Scholl, in Bishop Street. Mr. Scholl holds the position of round-house foreman for the Erie railroad, at Jersey City.

Misses Anna V. and Catherine Lyon, who have been attending school at Linden Hall Seminary, at Littitz, returned to Bellefonte, the latter part of last week, to spend the summer with their aunt, Mrs. Ellis L. Orvis. Miss Anna Lyon graduated from the school with high honors.

A splendid program marked the observance of Children's Day in the Bellefonte Presbyterian church, on Sunday. The children were especially well trained for the occasion and the exercises were greatly enjoyed by the large congregation in attendance.

After being away since March, last, Rev. Silas Everard Quimby returned to Bellefonte on Saturday night, and is again at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Horatio S. Moore, on West Curtin Street. Mr. Quimby was recently honored with the degree of D. D. by the Syracuse University.

There was a happy little reunion on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Troup, on South Thomas Street. It marked the home-coming of Mrs. Troup's mother, Mrs. Evaline Bell, who had been away for almost one year. During this time Mrs. Bell visited at Englewood, New Jersey, and also at East Hampton, Long Island, and while she had a most delightful time it didn't begin to compare with the joy of Mrs. Troup when she welcomed her back home.

Dr. and Mrs. David Dale made an automobile trip to Philipsburg on Sunday.

The Bellefonte Methodist Sunday School is holding its annual basket picnic at Hecla Park today.

Mr. and Mrs. Krape, of Salona, visited over Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. S. Herr, on East Curtin Street.

Street Commissioner Showers on Monday put a force of men to work oiling High Street, between the Pennsylvania Railroad station and the bridge. Let us hope that there may not be a repetition of the mess of oil and mud which resulted when the first section of the street was "treated."

Miss Lida Morris on Friday, last, entertained the Tyrone Card Club at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Morris, on East Linn Street. There were twelve tables. The several members of the club drove to Bellefonte, returning to Tyrone on an afternoon train.

Toner L. Heaton, a breakman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was seriously injured in the company yards, at South Fork, on Monday afternoon, of last week. His right leg was cut off at the knee and the left leg terribly crushed. Mr. Heaton's family reside at Snow Shoe.

One of our very pleasant visitors recently was Mrs. M. M. Sommers, of this place, who called to adjust her subscription to "The Republican." To show our appreciation of her promptness in paying the editor it shall be our determination to make "The Republican" more interesting than ever as it visits her home every week during the coming year.

The funeral of the late George D. Bayard, whose sudden death at Altoona was noted in "The Republican" last week, was held from St. John's Episcopal church, here, on Friday morning, last. Interment was made at the Union cemetery. The pall bearers were Allen S. Garman, Alexander Morrisen, Fred Reese, Philip D. Waddle, George R. Meek and C. M. Parrish.

Frank M. Derstine, an old Bellefonte boy who is forging to the front in business circles, this week removed from Reading to Altoona, where he will open and take charge of a clothing department of the big store of W. F. Gable & Co. During the several years that Frank has been located at Reading he established a reputation as a capable manager and his removal to Altoona is a call to a larger field and one where his responsibilities will be much extended. His family will visit in Bellefonte and other places during the summer. Here's extending congratulations to a Bellefonte boy on his success.

Walter B. Furst on Monday returned to his duties, at New Haven, Conn.

A reception will be given to the mothers and babes of the Cradle Roll and Beginner's department of the Methodist Sunday school on Thursday afternoon June 30, from 2 to 4 o'clock. Recitations and exercises will be given by Mrs. Anna Woodcock's class and refreshments will be served.

Company No. 1 of the United Brethren church will hold a festival on Thomas Street, opposite Gamble, Gheen & Co's. mill, on Saturday evening, June 25. If you want a good cake go to this festival. Should it rain on this evening the festival will be held in the Aid Society room at the church.

Corn. Garman has finally decided to locate in Williamsport. He will take possession of the St. Charles hotel there, probably next week. It will be regretted by the many friends of the Garmans that this change in business on Mr. Garman's part will necessitate their removing from Bellefonte.

Rev. Ambrose M. Schmidt, D. D., pastor of the Reformed church, last week attended a special meeting of the West Susquehanna classis at Selinsgrove, at which time three new ministers were received into the classis. Rev. Schmidt preached the sermon at the installation of Rev. John A. Ditzler as pastor of the Selinsgrove charge.

Samuel Rumberger, agent and messenger for the American Express Company, thinks the rates on express ought to be raised. On Tuesday morning he received via the Stork line a shipment which the American could not handle. It was a boy and that accounts for the pleasant manner in which "Sammy" has been looking after the company's business the past few days.

Centre County graduates at State College last week were Thomas G. Haugh, of Benore; Guy W. Jacobs, of Centre Hall; George A. Hoy, of Waddle; Roy H. Mobley, of Beech Creek; Walter W. Muffley, of Howard, and Charles E. Glover, Roy B. Fehr, Charles D. Faunce, Sidney P. Armsby, Howard H. Agee, Clarence E. McCormick, and Joshua P. Pillsbury, of State College.

Centre County friends of the George W. Etters family, who have been residing at 4508 North Uber Street, Philadelphia, will be interested to learn that they have removed to 4548 Wayne Avenue, Germantown, which is one of the prettiest parts of Philadelphia. "The Republican" is a regular visitor to the Etters home and we this week received a nice, crisp postal money order with instructions to advance the date on the label. Thank you.

From far off Scotland, South Dakota, yesterday we received a letter from Mrs. Thomas Jones, enclosing a postal money order and instruction to advance the date on the label on her paper. Mrs. Jones is a regular reader of "The Republican" and thus secures each week all the news from home. It is her hope that she will be able to visit her folks in Centre county in the near future. For the kind and prompt remittance we extend our thanks.

Mrs. Wm. Scholl, daughter Cora and son Wm. Scholl, Jr., and wife visited relatives at Eagleville on Wednesday.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Lutheran church will hold a social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Gettig, on Thomas Street, on Thursday, July 7. Everybody is cordially invited.
